ITALO-GERMAN COUNTER PLAN INACCEPTABLE

Belligerent Rights Would Help Franco

London, July 2.

The Chairman's sub-committee on non-intervention under Lord Plymouth, is now meeting to draft a communique dealing with the deadlock which has arisen due to the mutual inacceptability of Anglo-French and Italo-German plans.

The Anglo-French opposition to the Italo-German proposal to grant belligerent rights to both parties in the Spanish civil war, is based on the grounds that these rights would give General Francisco Franco an undue advantage.

The new situation will be referred to a meeting of the full committee on non-intervention for further consideration.

The afternoon meeting of the sub-committee was adjourned after two and three-quarter hours of deliberation. It is understood meetings of the full committee and the sub-committee will be held next week.

At this morning's meeting of the sub-committee, Herr Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador to London and chief delegate at the non-intervention sessions, detailed the German proposals to combine non-intervention with the granting of belligerent rights to the fighting parties. It is understood the British declared the proposals were unacceptable, and the French and Russian representatives gave the plan a critical reception but agreed to refer it to their Governments.

Superior On Sea

In the course of the meeting it was stated that General Franco, Insurgent commander-in-chief, would be placed in an unduly favourable position by the granting of belligerent rights, owing to the superiority of his forces on the sea.

Germany, however, challenged this contention, declaring that Germany did not desire in any way to favour the Insurgents at the expense of the Spanish Government.

It is understood Germany would favourably consider allowing German observers to participate in the land control scheme if her proposals are accepted.—Reuter.

Non-Intervention Cannot Survive

London, July 2.

If a complete supervision scheme cannot be devised and agreed to, those withholding agreement would, in the view of the British Government, render it difficult, if not impossible, for the policy of non-intervention to survive. This was the declaration of Lord Plymouth, chairman of the Non-Intervention Committee when he opened to-day's meeting of the sub-committee of that body of which he is chairman. The statement is contained in an official communique.

The Portuguese representative said his Government would accept the Anglo-French plan if it were unanimously approved by the committee. The Belgian, Swedish, Czecho-Slovakian and Russian representatives approved the Anglo-French proposals.

The French representative declared that neither of the Spanish parties could establish an effective blockade and such a situation would gravely interfere with legitimate international trade and might lead to most serious incidents.

The Russian representative said the Italo-German plan completely upset the balance in favour of General Franco and would strike a death-blow to the non-intervention agreement.

Marked Difference

London, July 2.

As a result of to-day's meeting the of Non-Intervention Sub-Committee, it is clear that, while no breakdown has occurred, marked difference of opinion and of principle exists between the Italians and Germans and to some extent, the Portuguese, on the one side, and on the other side, members of the Committee.

It has been decided to circulate a communique which contains a full report of to-day's proceedings to all 27 members of the full Committee, in order that those not members of the Sub-Committee may report on the procedure to their Governments, and there seems a probability that a

DANGEROUS INCIDENT SETTLED

Russia And Japan Withdrawing All Troops At Once

Moscow, July 2.

A satisfactory solution to the Amur River incident, in which a Russian patrol craft was badly damaged and a Japanese vessel was captured, has now been effected.

This word reached the public at the conclusion of conversations between the Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Mamoru Shigemitsu, and the Foreign Commissar, M. Maxim Litvinoff, to-day.

The Ambassador stated that the Soviet had agreed to the immediate withdrawal of their troops from the two islands particularly involved, upon Japan's assurance that Manchukuo would also remove troops and ships from the vicinity.—Reuter.

Chicago Cubs Hit Hard

Keen Duel With Pittsburgh

New York, July 2.

The Chicago Cubs continued to win in the National League to-day, though New York pounded close behind them.

Cubs defeated Pittsburgh in a heavy-hitting game, in which they were actually out-slugged by the Pirates. The Pirates hit 13, Suhr tallying a homer, but Galan, Demaree, Hartnett and Jurges all hit home runs for the Cubs, and swelled their 11 hits. The score was eight to seven.

New York was beating Boston, meanwhile, six to two, with 13 hits to seven. Giants had two errors, and Mancuso hit a home run.

Brooklyn blanked Philadelphia, scoring three runs on 11 hits. Hamlin allowed seven hits.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Di Maggio's homer did not help New York, who fell, after a long string of victories, before Washington, eight to three.

Boston beat Philadelphia, Chapman and Mills hitting homers, and Peters circled the bags for the Athletics.

St. Louis defeated Chicago, four to two.

GLOBE FLIERS LOST

Feared Down In Pacific

PONTOONS LACKING

New York, July 2.

It is feared that Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, the famous American flier who is attempting to circle the globe with three companions, has been forced down at sea.

Her big monoplane is not equipped with pontoons and will not float for long.

The Coast Guard cutter Itasca is preparing to search for Mrs. Putnam's plane, following the receipt of a radio message at 8.12 p.m. G.M.T. stating the fliers had only half an hour's fuel and could not see land.

An hour earlier Mrs. Putnam was 100 miles from Howland Island, where the Itasca is stationed. She is obviously off her course, and has probably overflown her mark.—Reuter.

Can Float Indefinitely

Los Angeles, July 2.

Lockheed Aircraft officials said the plane which Mrs. Amelia Putnam was flying came down with empty gasoline tanks.

On a calm sea, however, it is expected the ship would float indefinitely.—United Press.

Planes Cannot Assist

New York, July 2.

It is learned the Coast Guard cutter Itasca will search north-west of Lowland Island for Mrs. Amelia Putnam's missing plane. The sea is smooth, visibility nine miles and ceiling unlimited.

The Navy Department revealed it was studying plans for despatching seaplanes to search for Mrs. Putnam, but it is feared there is not sufficient fuel at Lowland Island to replenish supplies of machines which would go on the hunt after they had flown the 1,900 miles from Honolulu.—United Press.

COSTLY AMERICAN REGIME

Spends Millions Over Income

But Owns Half World's Gold

Washington, July 2.

The Treasury closed its fiscal year, ending June 30, with a gross deficit of $2,811,000,000, compared with a revised presidential estimate of $2,557,000,000 and last year's $4,361,000,000.

Receipts amounted to $5,294,000,000, or $70,000,000 above the estimate, and expenditure was $8,105,000,000, or $320,000,000 above the estimate.

The gross national debt is now $36,424,000,000, representing an increase of $2,640,000,000 since June 30 last year.

National gold holdings are worth $12,318,000,000 at present prices, and are up by $2,300,000,000 for the year. They represent 53 per cent. of the world's monetary gold.

The latest figures indicate the Government has spent about $13,500,000,000 more than it received during the four fiscal years of its existence.—Reuter.

"GLORIOUS FOURTH"

Independence Day falls to-morrow, but the American anniversary will not be observed here until Monday, when H. M. warships in harbour will be dressed overall from 8 a.m. till sunset and a salute will be fired by H.M.S. Tamar.

The day is also being observed on Monday by a reception which the United States Consul and the American community are holding in the American Club from 11.30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

LOST IN PACIFIC

Here is Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, famous American flier, was saying good-bye to her publisher husband, George P. Putnam in the upper photograph just before she hopped off on the first leg of a flight on which she intended to circle the globe. Now she is missing, having failed to reach Howland Island from New Guinea. Below, the twin-motored Lockheed monoplane taking off from Miami for San Juan, first leg of the flight. It ran out of fuel on Howland Island jump.

Naval Officer Decorated For Gallantry

London, July 2.

His Majesty the King to-day awarded the Albert Medal to Lieut.-Commander B. G. Scurfield for gallantry in saving the lives of five men when the destroyer Hunter struck a mine off the Spanish coast recently.

Lieut.-Commander Scurfield leaped into the flooded engine-room, where a number of ratings were trapped in boiling steam and water, and dragged several of his unconscious crew to safety. They did not all recover, but five of those he carried to the deck owe their lives to him.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

Substitute For Court Reform Bill

President Is Given Power Of Naming Justices Annually

Washington, July 2.

A complete Democratic substitute for President Roosevelt's Supreme Court Reform Bill came before the Senate to-day.

Senator Joseph Robinson, of Arkansas, leader of the Democratic majority in the Senate, explained the proposals would permit three appointments to the Supreme Court within the next six months. He said the Bill was based on the theory of one appointment to the Court by a President each year, thus permitting two new justices to be added within that time, as well as an additional appointment to fill the existing vacancy.

It is proposed, too, to raise the retirement age to 75, provided additional judges can be appointed annually by the President for those who continue to serve after they have passed the retiring age.—Reuter.

Americans Make Fine Recovery in Fierce Doubles Engagement

Two important British successes were scored at Wimbledon yesterday. Mrs. R. M. King and Mrs. Pittman reached the final of the women's doubles, while G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey entered the final of the men's doubles. Hughes and Tuckey are holders, and have to meet the American Davis Cup pair, Donald Budge and Gene Mako this afternoon.

There was very nearly an all-English final in the women's doubles, but Miss E. M. Dearman and Miss Joan Ingram lost in the semi-final to Mme. Mathieu (France) and Miss "Billy" Yorke (Britain) after two close sets.

Budge and Mako had to play five sets before they beat the German couple, von Cramm and Henkel. Actually the Americans lost the first two sets and appeared to be doomed to defeat. Then they recovered in amazing fashion, winning the third set at 6-2, the fourth at 6-4 and the final at 6-3.

Seldom has Wimbledon seen such a complete metamorphosis. It ranks as one of the most brilliant successes ever achieved by the young Americans.

The chief results of the day's play, as cabled by Reuter follow:

Ex-Soldiers Still Must Serve Nation

King Of Belgians Makes Appeal

Brussels, July 2.

A stirring appeal for national service was made by King Leopold to leaders of ex-soldiers' associations whom he received at the Palace and to whom he explained the servicemen's demand for a referendum on the Amnesty Bill could not be acceded to because the principle of the referendum was not recognised by the Belgium Constitution.

The King declared it was a mistake to attribute to the Amnesty Bill the character of an attack on the country's dignity.

A few days ago the ex-soldiers rioted outside the Palace, demanding the Amnesty Bill be withdrawn, since it proposed to free war time "traitors."

To-day they listened eagerly to their King's closing words:

"National service is the ideal for which you fought. It should continue the object of your collective action. More than ever Belgium needs union and internal peace."—Reuter.

Anna Lee—Britain's Glamour Girl

Anna Lee's last picture is Gaumont-British "Non-Stop New York," recently completed at Shepherd's Bush

MY day often begins at 6 o'clock in the morning with the prospect of 12 hours' work before me!

All that time I have heavy make-up on my face and for many of those hours the glare of countless arc lamps falls full on me. And so I made out a beauty routine which would protect my skin and complexion.

When I first get up I spray my face with a rose-coloured lotion. I think this is much more refreshing than just dabbing it with cotton wool—and so much more economical.

That's all I do before studio make-up. At other times I follow the spraying with a foundation cream, also rose-coloured, which keeps my skin a healthy colour.

THAT is the groundwork. Then I put on lipstick, which I use as rouge as well in order to get a perfect colour harmony.

Powder comes next, Peau de peche (peachskin) is my choice for the day-time and a lighter shade, angelskin, for evening. The next step is just a suspicion of eye-shadow and, last of all, mascara.

The most important part of my beauty routine, though, comes at night. To begin with the make-up is taken off with an orange flower cream and, before getting into my bath, I smear on a skin food made of lily bulbs—there's a story I'll tell you about that skin food.

When I came back from Egypt, after making "Camels are Coming," my skin felt frightfully parched and dry after weeks in the desert although I noticed that the Arab women had lovely skins. I wondered how they managed to keep them in spite of constant exposure to heat and sand.

Just about that time I happened to hear about a beauty specialist who had studied Arab beauty preparations and, as you may imagine, I lost no time in going to her. She gave me this skin food, made from an old Arab recipe handed down from mother to daughter by word of mouth so that other jealous inmates of the harem could not discover it. I've used it ever since.

All the time I'm in the bath I leave this on, the steam helps it to soak into the pores, then I massage it well in before removing it. Afterwards I spray my face with a lotion which was used by Marie Antoinette—and was a closely-guarded secret of that tragic queen. So two at least, of my beauty preparations are most romantic.

That is the daily routine. Every fortnight I have a facial.

FIGURES are just as important as faces I think, and to keep the pores of the skin all over the body working properly I have a herbal bath every week.

Luckily my weight does not vary very much and so there is no need to have courses of violent massage or resort to rigid diets—but I firmly believe in the "daily dozen" and so I do set exercises every day.

Then I'm rather fond of golf as an outdoor exercise. And I think if you are going to look vital you must be enthusiastic and be interested in people and things—and people are pleasant enough to tell me that I am.

And so, although my profession of screen work is harder on the complexion than any other—except, perhaps, a coal miner's—I've managed, with care, to keep my skin as healthy as it was when I lived, as a child, in the country.

THE JOYS OF "COLD COOKING"

WE ARE always hearing a great deal about the usefulness of refrigeration but not so often about its pleasures. We are duly thankful that the milk has survived a particularly thundery night, but have we also given thanks for a pleasantly cold sweet on that sultry evening? In short, do we use our refrigerators for what someone has called "cold cooking"?

To take a very simple example, how very much nicer, on a warm day, is a sandwich which has been kept cold in the refrigerator than one of those limp and greasy affairs so often handed to us at tea parties. The butter, after being conveniently moist for spreading, has now got firm, and the bread seems to have an unusual substance that makes it most attractive.

And what a difference it will make to that informal sherry party if the Amontillado has been left in that cool and magic chest for about an hour, and is ice-cold when poured out.

So very many cold dishes benefit from being slightly chilled before being served. Cold fish salad, for instance, or a cold terrine. Of course you don't want it to begin to freeze, but it should be just chilled enough to lose any limpness.

Little attentions like this will make all the difference to your next luncheon or dinner party, and you will be able to add the contrast between heat and cold to the other contrasts of colour and flavour that make the perfect meal.

Even breakfast will derive a special benefit from coldness. The grape-fruit can be really cold and refreshing: if it is winter, the ice-cold cream will afford a delicious contrast to the hot porridge. Butter can be served in those jolly little rolls or flakes or balls, instead of in an oily pat which is one of the most discouraging preludes to a hot summer's day.

And what a stand-by your refrigerator can be against the chance visitor! It will be a great relief to know we can raid the refrigerator, where one or two terrines, of veal or chicken or pork, will have been waiting for a week or so for just some such opportunity.

AMBROSE HEATH.

Tapioca Meringue

THIS is a good sweet for a hot day when ordinary tapioca pudding is unsuitable. Soak a teacupful of pearl tapioca in a pint of milk the night before it is required. Next day add three beaten egg yolks and four ounces of sugar.

Heat half a pint of milk almost to boiling-point, stir in the tapioca mixture and cook the whole in a double saucepan until it thickens without actually boiling.

Let it cool slightly, then flavour with vanilla and fold in a stiffly-beaten egg white. Pour it into a greased pie-dish, cover it with a meringue made from the two remaining egg whites and a little icing sugar, and brown in the oven.

Keeping the House Cool

By BASEDEN BUTT

WITH THE arrival of hot weather the housewife's chief concern is to keep the interior of the house as cool as possible. She will be more than ever thankful now if her house is well and truly built, with cavity walls and efficient insulating materials lining both walls and roof. She will also be happier if there are trees around the house, for in addition to throwing welcome shade, they will check the evaporation of moisture. And if the house is old, with stone flags or quarry tiles downstairs, the rugs covering these floors may be taken up temporarily.

So Simple

There are, however, many other ways in which the house may be kept cooler, and some are so simple that their very simplicity may cause them to be overlooked. Not only all windows but the principal doors, especially on the ground floor, should be kept open, and if an electric fan is installed near one of the windows cooling currents of air pass right through the house. There are oscillating and almost silent fans nowadays, most of them with the additional protection of a safety guard. Incidentally, besides moving the air these fans discourage house-flies.

Exterior sunblinds on the south side of the house are another necessity, and if these are not already provided, they should certainly be installed without delay. Canvas blinds are obtainable with water-proof casings which hold the blinds when they are not in use.

Other important items, especially so far as a cool kitchen is concerned, are a heat-insulated cooker, and a hot-water supply obtained by means of gas or electricity.

Ice-Water

That modern necessity, the refrigerator, in addition to ensuring a plentiful supply of cool, fresh food-stuffs, can also be a valuable help in keeping the house cool. For with its aid it is a simple matter for the terrace and loggia to be washed down or lavishly sprinkled with ice-water at least twice daily. As the water evaporates this will create cooling currents of air whose effect is noticeable inside the house. If terrace and loggia are treated in this way just before luncheon and again at three o'clock, the hottest part of the day will be much more bearable.

To make the house look cool as well as feel cool, winter curtains should be replaced by hangings of ice blue or apple green silk, or a pleasing chintz to match the chair covers.

Good Cooking — By Ambrose Heath

Dish of Cutlets

I WONDER how often cutlets figure on the menu, and how often they are just egg-and-bread-crumbed and fried. And I wonder how many people have thought, "How dull they are always the same way!"

I much prefer to have my cutlets grilled, or even what I believe is called "pan-grilled," that is, put into a very hot frying-pan which has just been lightly rubbed over with a piece of fat (to prevent the cutlets from sticking) and dry fried, as it were in that. They are almost the same as grilled.

BUT having cooked them in either of those two ways how often do we vary them by some simple garnish? For example, cook some macaroni or spaghetti, drain it well, and mix with it some good tomato sauce and grated cheese. This makes an excellent garnish for cutlets.

Or we could have them dished with a little bunch of watercress in the middle of the dish and some "straw potatoes" at each end. These potatoes are cut raw into the thinnest of thin strips, and then fried in deep fat for a minute or two and well drained.

Or we could serve them with some fried tomato slices, or small baked tomatoes, and in the middle a heap of crisply fried sliced onions, which are best done by first dipping the onion rings in flour, and then in beaten white of egg, then in flour again, and frying them in deep fat.

MUSHROOMS, too, make a very good garnish for cutlets, and some spaghetti boiled and drained and tossed in a little butter is a good accompaniment when mixed with some fried mushrooms cut in slices or quarters and with grated cheese.

But one of the very best accompaniments of all is just a plain lettuce salad, the leaves torn carefully apart, well washed and dried and dressed quite simply with a mixture of salt, pepper, one part vinegar and two parts olive oil.

MOTHER MURDERS DAUGHTER THEN CUTS SON'S THROAT

BECAUSE SHE WAS IN LOVE WITH A MAN

HORRIBLE NEW YORK TRAGEDY

New York, June 12.

APPARENTLY crazed, Mrs. Helen Tiernan, 25, confessed she had murdered her seven-year-old daughter, Helen, and cut her four-year-old son's throat, because she loved a man and decided to sacrifice her offspring to make room for him in her small apartment.

New York's third brutal child murder of the year horrified the community. Within three months three girls, one an infant of four years, have been killed under unusually revolting circumstances.

Mrs. Tiernan and George Christodulus, the man in the case, were apprehended by authorities a short time after Helen's body was found. Mrs. Tiernan was charged with homicide. Christodulus, a Greek restaurant worker, was held by the police as a material witness. George's employer said the man had been working throughout that day in the restaurant.

The Tiernan tragedy occurred on a Saturday afternoon in May in a forest near Brookhaven, Long Island, where Mrs. Tiernan confessed she took the two youngsters, Helen and James, from New York by train ostensibly on a picnic. James survived the trip despite his cut throat and murderous bludgeoning.

MULTILATED BODY FOUND

Sunday morning, a 16-year-old school girl and a friend, out for a morning stroll in the woods, came upon the horribly mutilated body of Helen. The body of the little girl was hacked, battered and burned almost beyond recognition. Her pink silk dress, part of which was burned off, smelled of gasoline. The gasoline had apparently been poured on her and ignited while she was still alive. Her back and legs were blistered and her hands were cut as though she had tried to drag herself away from the searing flames by grasping at the underbrush.

Although a crowd of several hundred people gathered around the corpse, it was not until nearly two hours later that James was found in the adjoining underbrush where he had lain all night. There was a four inch gash across his throat; his face and head were terribly bruised and an attempt had evidently been made to burn him alive; his eyebrows were singed and he bore other superficial burns.

Mrs. Tiernan's first statement to the police, which she later repudiated exonerating George Christodulus, asserted:

"We decided to go to Brookhaven because the children had been there before at picnics."……

"We took a hatchet, a bread knife and a pair of scissors. I suggested that we had better take a quart of gasoline that I had bought to clean a dress."……

"When I got off at the Brookhaven station I walked down the road a ways and met George. We put the children in the car and drove around about half an hour."……

SAVAGE ATTACK

"We went into the woods about 100 feet off the road. The children started picking flowers and they separated. Then I hesitated and I told George I didn't want to go through with it. While I was telling this to George, Helen came over with a handful of flowers that she had picked."……

"George grabbed the hatchet and hit Helen three times on the head. Helen fell down on her back. I took the knife and cut her throat."……

"Helen screamed and Jimmy heard her and ran toward me. He was crying and saying, 'Mommy, mommy, what happened?' Then George hit Jimmy twice on the head with the hatchet. When he fell down I cut his throat. I took the gasoline from the suitcase and poured it on Helen. George lit a match and set fire to her clothes."

"We got in the automobile and George drove me to the railroad station. When I got home I burned all the things that had belonged to the children in the incinerator."

The first of the other two child murders that startled New York was the death of four-year-old Joan Morvan at her Jamaica home in New York City, March 1. Joan died of peritonitis following a criminal assault February 28 to which Howard Magnussen, described by police as "looking 17 and having a mind of 8", confessed.

The second of the child killings was the assault and murder of Einer Sporrer, pretty nine-year-old daughter of Bavarian immigrants, by Salvatore Ossido, Italian immigrant barber who is married and the father of two small children. Ossito was free under $1,000 bail on charges of impairing the morals of a twelve-year-old girl when he attacked Einer on March 20, killed her with a hammer and left her body in a burlap bag on a doorstep two blocks from her home. After a quick trial he was sentenced to electrocution and at the time of the Brookhaven tragedy was awaiting execution.

Mrs. Tiernan said she blamed George in her first confession out of revenge, because she was told that he was married and could not marry her.

Hereditary insanity will be the plea of Mrs. Tiernan when she goes on trial for her life. Her mother was mentally incompetent for twenty years before she died eight years ago. During the last five years of her life she was confined to an institution for the insane.— United Press.

Communion For The Divorced

—DR. BARNES' PLEA

A DEFENCE of the principle of Communion for divorces was made by Dr. Barnes, Bishop of Birmingham, in his address to the Birmingham Diocesan Conference recently.

Some people, he said, wanted to excommunicate all who, after divorce, married again.

"I would remind you that by rules of your Church a person can only be repelled from the Holy Communion if he be an open and notorious evil-liver, and the bishop ultimately shall be the judge.

"Most certainly an innocent person who had remarried after divorce could not be excluded under such a rule. I doubt whether a guilty party to a divorce suit who was subsequently living faithfully with a new partner could be excluded.

"All that is possible is to make of the new union a stable marriage in which children, if there be any, shall be 'Christianly and virtuously brought up.'

"To that end if those who after divorce had remarried sought God's help in Holy Communion I could not bring myself to refuse them."

"Mr. Deeds Goes To Town" (Majestic Theatre, to-day).—One of the old favourites which is never likely to pall. To see it once is not enough. You will enjoy its breeziness, novelty and freshness all the more a second time.

"Stowaway" (Queen's Theatre, Alhambra Theatre, to-day).—Now she's in China! Who? None other than Shirley Temple! She even talks and sings Chinese, and she takes charge of a fascinating romance, faces danger in glittering Shanghai, performs in a Chinese Theatre and, in short, plays the most unusual role she has ever had, in her new and most thrill-filled picture, "Stowaway". It's a picture for your "must" list—with a gripping story, a glamorous cast of great stars, Gordon and Revel's latest song hits, and—first, last and always—the incomparable Shirley! In addition to Robert Young and Alice Faye, Shirley's strong supporting cast includes Eugene Pallette, Helen Westley, Arthur Treacher, J. Edward Bromberg and Astrid Allwyn.

"Maytime" (Oriental Theatre, to-morrow).—Topping even their triumphs in "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie", Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, America's favourite singing stars now come to the screen at the Oriental Theatre on Sunday and Monday in "Maytime", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's lavish adaptation of the Rida Johnson Young operetta which was one of the memorable hits of the New York stage.

King's Doctor Lays Down Rules For Leading Happy Life

London, June 15.

The five basic principles of life that lead to health and happiness have been laid down by Lord Horder, the King's doctor.

They are (1) Enough of the right food; (2) Suitable shelter at the right price; (3) Access to the fresh air; (4) A reasonable amount of leisure and also of quiet; (5) A job of work.

"Proper housing of the people is one of the most important things in preventive medicine," Lord Horder told a meeting of housing experts. "Houses that are real homes are needed.

"Are we providing homes or are we only providing structures? I think people are sometimes happier in their old slums than in some of the, dare I say, 'modern slums.'"

Gangster's Church

Montreal, June 15.

A N imposing new church dominates the suburb of Westmount, Montreal.

The church is empty. No choir sings in the carved stalls, no congregation ever gathers in the nave.

Canadian church authorities refuse to consecrate the church —because it was built as a memorial to a gangster.

When Anthony Frank was sentenced to death for his part in a murder and bank robbery his widow erected the church to his memory.

CHILD FOR DUKE?

London, June 1.

Ann Maritzer, British astrologer, predicts that a child probably will be born to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and that it will become famous.

Miss Maritzer, who asserted that she was the first to predict—16 months ago—that the duke and Miss Wallis Warfield would marry, said "The child from its arrival will absorb the whole life of the Duchess."

plenary session will be summoned some time next week.

In opening this morning's meeting, which lasted for nearly three hours, Lord Plymouth renewed the Franco-British offer to take over the whole of the naval control scheme and to have neutral observers on their patrolling warships as an assurance that the work would be performed impartially. He said that a few months ago, all the Powers had agreed that naval supervision was an essential part of the scheme, and that Britain had seen no reason to change her view. The suggestion that belligerent rights should be granted to the two parties in Spain was not acceptable, and the British Government's view was that non-intervention could continue to function only if there was a complete scheme.

A Counter-Proposal

The German Ambassador, Herr von Ribbentrop, supported by the Italian Ambassador, Signor Grandi, then put forward a counter-proposal. This proposal stated that the German and Italian Governments were firmly resolved to maintain the principle of non-intervention, but they could not accept the Anglo-French proposal. They suggest that belligerent rights should be granted to the two sides in Spain, for then "all European Powers would add to their obligations, as signatories of the Non-Intervention Agreement, duties incumbent on neutral States according to the principles of international law adapted to the special situation in Spain." They also suggested that the observation of land frontiers, as well as supervision in ports, and with observers in ships flying the flag of non-intervention countries, should be maintained.

In a discussion which followed, representatives of Belgium, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia and Russia expressed the willingness of their Governments to accept the Anglo-French proposal.

The French Ambassador, M. Corbin, and Lord Plymouth criticised the partial nature of the German and Italian suggestions, which were clearly unacceptable.

Referred to Governments

Signor Grandi then recalled that at a previous meeting, when the Anglo-French proposal was first put forward, he and the German Ambassador had criticised it, but had consented to refer it to their respective Governments. He asked that a similar course might be adopted with regard to the German and Italian plan.

Lord Plymouth, as chairman, agreed to this suggestion, while again emphasising that he saw no likelihood of the British Government changing its view as to its obligations. —British Wireless.

ALLEGED THREATS

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

RECEIVES NOTES

Boston, July 1.

An elderly man named Morton D. Wainwright has been arrested here by Secret Service agents, on a charge of writing letters to President F. D. Roosevelt, threatening the life of the chief executive.

The local Secret Service Bureau says it is also anxious to trace threatening notes written to Miss Ethel Du Pont, the bride of Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, Jr. She was married to the President's son yesterday, three companies of regular army troops guarding the Du Pont estate where the ceremony and reception took place.—Reuter.

Long Investigation Ends

Boston, July 1.

As a climax to a 16-month investigation the Secret Service arrested Morton D. Wainwright, aged 72, the former United States Marshal of Seattle, for allegedly threatening to kill President Roosevelt.

Officials said that Wainwright was lately active in the Townsend movement.

The notes sent to the President were not made public, nor were the reasons for the alleged threats.—United Press.

PEIPING UNEASY

PRECAUTIONS TO CHECK DISTURBANCES

Peiping, July 2.

Uneasiness in Chinese political circles is mounting over the activities of plain-clothes men, many of whom have been arrested during the past few days, including two found loitering last night in the vicinity of the Hopei-Chahar Council offices. These two are alleged to have confessed that they were being employed to create disturbances during the elections for the National Assembly.

Precautions, described as semi-martial law, have been enforced since June 28. Persons in the streets late at night are liable to be searched at the point of the bayonet, while units of the 29th. Army have been brought into the suburbs.

Japanese sources declare that there is no foundation for Chinese alarm, but it is pointed out that officials are naturally anxious at the prolonged absence of Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan in Lolin, Shantung. This is generally attributed to his desire to escape from the insistence of Japanese pressure for the implementation of economic concessions, including the Tientsin and Shihchiachwang Railway.—Reuter.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON SERMON

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hongkong

SUBJECT AND TEXT

The subject of the Lesson Sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, to-morrow, July 4, will be: "God."

The Golden Text will be: "To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever." (Jude 1: 25).

Among others, the following citations from the Bible will be read: "And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them: insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel." (Matt. 15: 29-31).

The Lesson Sermon will also include the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The power of God brings deliverance to the captive. No power can withstand divine Love. Instead of God sending sickness and death, He destroy them, and brings to light immortality. Omnipotent and infinite Mind made all and includes all. This Mind does not make mistakes and subsequently correct them. God does not cause man to sin, to be sick, or to die. Truth has no consciousness of error. Love has no sense of hatred. Life has no partnership with death. Truth, Life, and Love are a law of annihilation to everything unlike themselves, because they declare nothing except God." (Pages 224, 206, 243).

FELL FROM TOP OF STAIRS

Accident That Brought on Neuritis

This old lady survived a fall downstairs from top to bottom, only to become a victim of neuritis and rheumatism. But in Kruschen she found the right remedy for that, as she writes in the following letter:—

"About three-and-a-half years ago I had the misfortune to fall downstairs from top to bottom. I did not feel any effect for some time; then I developed neuritis in both hands and arms. After trying a hundred-and-one remedies, it turned to rheumatism.

"I was persuaded to try Kruschen Salts and have now been taking them regularly for two years in my first cup of tea. Now I can use my hands and arms as I could before my accident. I am 69 years old, and still play the piano."—(Mrs.) P.L.

Rheumatic conditions are the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients of these Salts assist Nature to expel the dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

"One of the world's greatest transport systems"

THIS SPONTANEOUS TRIBUTE TO IMPERIAL AIRWAYS APPEARED IN NEWS WEEK, A WELL-KNOWN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER

'Since its organisation twelve years ago, Britain's Imperial Airways .... has been one of the world's greatest air transport systems .... It was one of the first air lines in the world to show a profit ... Its flying and mechanical staffs have been consistently excellent .... The Air Ministry has decided that the Empire needed a strengthened air transport service .... Thus Imperial Airways' re-equipment programme has not only been started but pushed forward with the utmost dispatch .... Back of all this astounding energy lies a new British air transport policy that causes transport experts of other countries a lot more concern than the explosion of the 'slow-old-Imperial' tradition .... All first-class mail addressed from one part of the British Empire to the other will be carried without surcharge .... What such a British policy means to the rest of the world's air lines remains to be seen, but most observers expect widespread repercussions .... In any case the sleeping lion now aroused is showing no lack of speed in getting under way'

CROONERS—"HAPLESS, HELPLESS, HOPELESS NINNIES"

Durban, June 7.

MR. EDWARD DUNN, musical director of Durban, today said: "Crooning has been described as the loftiest peak of imbecility in this civilised era. I believe this is right about crooning, wrong about the era. An age that doesn't strangle crooners at birth isn't civilised.

"The crooner belongs to the United States, where he is a development of that quaint social theory that, however virile a man may be among men, he must be a whining worm to his women folk. I feel sure he is regarded by all self-respecting males as an insult to his sex.

"Song Romeos of the past conducted themselves with a better face than our present helpless, hapless, hopeless ninnies. Should madam decline, they didn't damp the pavement with their tears and implore her not to leave them tears as souvenirs. They bowed with dignity, raised their bowlers and joined the boys."

"Thanks to MARIE'S oil-process permanents my hair is always beautifully lustrous now!"

Beautiful hair is as desirable as a lovely complexion. So avoid permanents which leave the hair brittle and dry, and shun soapy shampoos as you would the plague. We use Palmolive Special Shampoo which keeps the hair in perfect condition throughout the hot months.

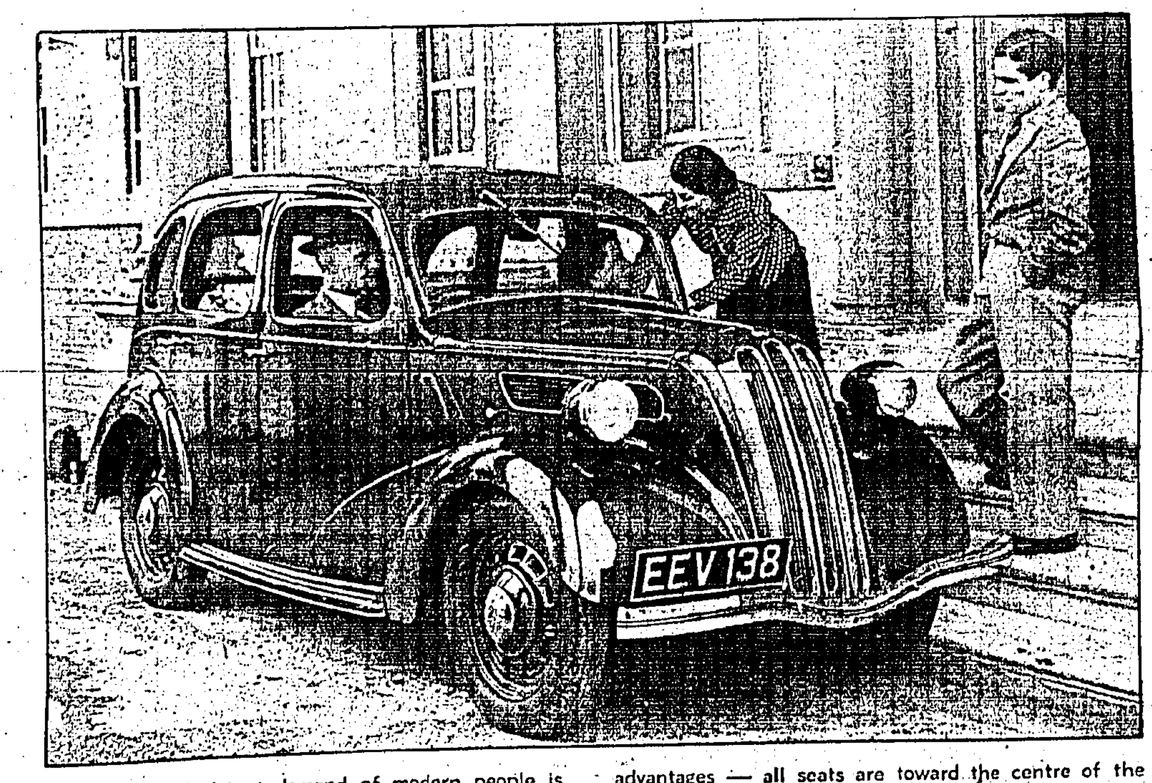
THE NEW FORD "TEN"

THE ARISTOCRAT OF THE LIGHT CAR CLASS

BRITISH MADE THROUGHOUT



The most insistent demand of modern people is for the maximum of comfort and convenience in cars that are economical to own. The new Ford "Ten" has been designed with this requirement especially in mind — to yield still higher standards of riding luxury, matching superb performance and engineering excellence, at unusually low cost. Generous accommodation is a first essential, but experienced motorists know that seating position and suspension design are also vital factors determining riding comfort. In these respects the new car has exclusive advantages — all seats are toward the centre of the car, between the axles; springs are mounted outside the wheelbase, providing an exceptionally long springbase; and torque tube and radius rod drive (found in no other inexpensive car but Ford) permits the use of soft, flexible springs giving fully-protective action. These features, with newly-designed seating, yield riding smoothness and comfort which are distinctive and outstanding — matched by few, except far larger, cars.

PRETTY SHANGHAI WEDDING

McCann—Collaco

A pretty June wedding took place in Shanghai last week when Miss Julia Geraldina Collaco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Collaco, of Shanghai, became the bride of Mr. Michael Dennis William McCann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. McCann, of Bristol, England.

The ceremony was attended by a few friends of the young couple. The bride was attended by Miss Millie Silva as bridesmaid, while Mr. R. Furness was the groom's best man.

The bride wore a smart white linen suit with white blouse. Her hat and accessories were also in white. The bridesmaid wore a becoming blue linen suit with yellow organdie blouse and blue hat.

Gangsters' Amazing Haul

Industry Robbed of £10,000,000 a Day

CRIME laboratories, equipped with marvellous detective devices, are to be the newest and most deadly weapons in the war against American gangsters.

Details of these scientific plans to stamp out crime were told recently by Mr. Maurice Holland, unofficial right-hand man of Mr. Edgar Hoover, the chief of the G-men.

Mr. Hoover is in London with a deputation of American bankers and business men.

Mr. Holland is a member of the National Research Council of America, who are placing 50 up-to-date laboratories at the disposal of G-men.

"A single fibre of cotton . . . the saliva left on the stub of a cigarette . . . meagre clues like these will be enough to identify a criminal in our laboratories," said dynamic Mr. Holland.

"A new type of paper has been devised for wrapping round ransom money.

KIDNAPPERS FOILED

"It retains a clear impression of the finger-prints of the man who received the money.

"Our latest discovery is a new and clearer way of identifying finger-prints by painting objects with a silver nitrate solution.

"When this process was used on the Lindbergh baby kidnapping ladder more than 600 finger-prints were revealed."

Mr. Holland set his jaw.

"Gangsters rob American industry of £3,000,000,000 a year—a quarter of the national income," he said grimly.

"The time has come to stamp them out, and by scientific methods we shall do it."

OLD MOORE FEARS THE WORST

GLOOMY PROPHECIES FOR NEXT YEAR

Old Moore is really too disheartening! Just as we all are looking forward to continued peace and prosperity, the aged astrologer has to predict for us a future of disaster, pestilence, and sudden death.

His Almanack for 1938, published by W. Foulsham and Co., will carry to nearly 3,000,000 people a message of gloom and fear quite worthy of the most morbid modern novelist.

War is practically inevitable, even for America. Under the baneful influence of Mars, with Gemini hovering round to make quite certain, Russia will play the part of the big bad wolf. While she is simultaneously challenging three Powers, those of her leaders who escape the assassination predicted for them will be carrying on a reign of terror at home.

In Britain, the non-combatant population have been thoughtfully provided with a full programme of fires, floods, and various disasters. In the circumstances, Old Moore's forecast for the Autumn quarter seems a trifle cynical. He says: "The position of Jupiter rising in the sign Aquarius is very beneficial for the people of Great Britain and will bring a great increase in every branch of industry. The Christmas season should show boomlike conditions throughout the country."

April is the most cheerless month. Old Moore has arranged for "powerful, malicious enemies to oppose our national interests," "heavy mortality for which a new form of influenza attacking the throat may be responsible," "Stock Market losses and much bitter criticism of the Budget," "serious accidents either by explosion or mining disaster," and Parliamentary troubles, with the possible defeat and resignation of the Government.

One can only hope that the old gentleman, whose eyesight must be failing with the years, omitted to take into account one or two of the brighter planets while exercising his prophetic art.

AMUR RIVER FRICTION

The Amur River incident, in which Japanese-Manchukuo forces sank a Soviet armed patrol boat, provides another example of the dangers inherent in the situation created by the failure of Russia and Manchukuo to come to a definite understanding regarding navigation rights in this region. There has been recurring trouble on the river for some considerable time past, and it is reported that, fully a week before the latest incident, an engagement took place near Pojarkovo, in which it was alleged that Soviet gunboats fired on Manchukuo patrol boats which were using the northern channel on the Soviet side of the river. One of the difficulties at this point is that the water is not deep enough to permit vessels of more than three feet draught navigating the southern channel. The Soviet Government has for some time past refused to permit Manchukuoan, and more particularly Japanese, vessels use of the northern channel, and when they have done so they have always run the risk of being fired at by Russian gunboats. On the other hand, the Japanese have been angered because they are not permitted to navigate this channel and are thus unable to send vessels from the Sungari up the Amur to Sakhalen. It is contended in some quarters that, inasmuch as the right of way along this channel is indispensable for Manchukuo, it would be better if some concession were made on the point, rather than to increase the dangers of the situation by forcing of the passage, thus compelling the Soviet to use force or to place themselves under the impression of showing weakness. Happily, the latest incident, which might easily have had serious repercussions, appears in process of adjustment, being treated as a localised affair. It is obvious, however, that these recurring clashes are likely to embitter relations between the Soviet and Japan, and it would be wise statesmanship to reach some final conclusion both on the matter of sovereignty and on boundary demarcation. There is a suggestion from Russian sources that both countries should withdraw their armed forces from the disputed region and that a commission be formed to settle the general issue on a mutually satisfactory basis. This appears an eminently sensible method of dealing with a situation which, if allowed to persist, might easily flare up into a major catastrophe.

Take A Look At Ourselves

By TANGYE LEAN

A PAMPHLET has just been issued which considers it of the greatest importance to discover how everyone gets out of bed in the morning, behaves at war memorials and street crossings, the things people put on their mantelpieces and the speed at which they go upstairs.*

The importance of observation is relatively a modern discovery. In the Middle Ages lofty edifices of thought were built on texts and logical formulae. It was possible for a first-class brain to argue that a hungry ass confronted by two identical mangers containing identical quantities of fodder would die of starvation in its inability to decide which to eat. It did not occur to the first class brain to put an ass in that situation and watch.

But at the Renaissance a "jump" occurred in the best minds; they perceived that the second method, the empirical and scientific, had advantages over the first, the philosophic theological, or merely superstitious.

SURPRISING results were achieved. Copernicus discovered that the earth moved round the sun, Leonardo that a machine observing certain empirically deduced principles could enable man to fly.

For four hundred years since then this method of approach to the universe has been slowly, erratically, and always in the teeth of derision and anger, gaining momentum.

Significantly, too, it has been coming closer to our individual selves. Darwin's researches among animals and fossils led him to establish the fact that homo sapiens had animal ancestors. Freud, working for years on end with human minds as his field, made the no more flattering discovery that these, too, had a relationship with the animal world.

Now a scientist called Tom Harrisson, who has spent part of his life with cannibals, and a poet, Charles Madge, who has spent part of his on a newspaper, have come to the very natural conclusion that it is time we examined ourselves.

In the past it has seemed desirable enough to examine other people; black people, yellow people, pigmy people, cannibals, these were the legitimate prey of the anthropologist; but it did not occur to him to examine his own habits and those of his charwoman, because he would have claimed them to be reasonable, not fantastic or superstitious.

✣

THAT is precisely what native civilisations have always thought. The following paragraph is quoted in Frazer's anthropological masterpiece, "The Golden Bough:"

There was one point about which they (an African tribe) were certain, and that was that the first-born of all, rich, poor, high and low, had to be strangled and thrown away. The chief of the Kerre said: "If I had a child now, it would have to be thrown away," laughing as if it were a great joke. What amused him really was that I should be so interested in their custom.

One thinks at first that the Chief's laughter was the cackle of a lunatic, but after perceiving that it was merely smug, one suspects that somewhere one has heard it before.

At school, perhaps, you displayed in your first days a pathetic ignorance of convention which reduced the form and even its master to roars of condescending laughter. In your city office there was that hysterical day when the nephew of the chief (office chief) turned up in a green tweed suit with leather buttons. You remember how Miss Doddall doubled up over her type-writer?

The African chief's laughter and Miss Doddall's are, of course, precisely similar. The former had got so used to the execution of all first-born children, the latter to the necessity of wearing hard collars and black suits, that these fantasies seemed to them on all fours with the proposition that fire will produce boiling water; their contradiction as ludicrous as the behaviour of a man who tried to make it boil by applying ice.

Inevitably the observation of ourselves is the last stage in the history of observation, because it is the last place in which one expects to discover anything odd. The Chief of the Kerre can see the fantastic nature of Miss Doddall's mind, and she can see his. But about their own sanity they feel quite comfortable, thank you very much.

To overcome this system of "blind spots" which is reproduced in every stratum of our own society Messrs. Harrisson and Madge are loosing a band of observers to watch and report with the detachment of an anthropologist in undiscovered territory inhabited by cannibals.

"In our survey of the Coronation, Chinese and Negro Observers will be watching the strange version of King-making which persists in the midst of western innovations."

✣

BUT their subject matter is not so much the exceptional as the normal. Their aim is to collect the data for a comprehensive map of life as it is lived by people in every kind of job on one of the most ordinary days of their lives. They want reports on

Sophistication and class,
'Flu epidemics,
Quick and slow walkers,
Punctuality of visitors,
Effects of aeroplanes, especially when flying low.

They want to do the novelist's job, but to do it as systematically and detachedly as the meteorologist compiling a weather report.

But one may ask, what use is this? Amusing, perhaps, fascinating, but will it have any practical value?

To that there are two answers. The first is that any increase in our knowledge about ourselves is good in itself. The complacent man and the hypocrite are less valuable than the man who is aware of his motives. In a crisis they cannot be relied on to carry out in fact what their speeches have proclaimed in theory.

In his introduction of "Mass Observation," Professor Julian Huxley says:

"Science has a twofold task—to know and to control. Some sort of scientific control of society, in place of the unscientific game of politics and the mere play of impersonal economic forces, is overdue: and we shall not obtain any efficient measure of control unless this is grounded in adequate knowledge."

The last half century has seen the development of a new science called psycho-analysis which made the extraordinary discovery that a whole range of illnesses was caused by the refusal of a person's mind to accept certain facts about itself and the world around it. It found that it could cure the illness by bringing the facts into consciousness and getting the mind to accept them.

Society as a whole has reached a stage not unlike that of the sick individual. Preparing for war is called by it preparing for peace. A committee of powers who are actively intervening in the affairs of another is called a Non-Intervention Committee. We have developed the faculty of deluding ourselves into the finest of our mental flowers.

THAT is why the survey undertaken by Harrisson and Madge may have a certain importance. On the day that the business man realises that he is only obeying a blind superstition in wearing a bowler hat and carrying an attache case there may be some chance for a perception of the truth in events of major importance, and if that perception ever arrives it may then be possible to control them instead of being at their mercy.

What these authors do not foresee is the possibility of opposition; they seem even to count on public co-operation and applause. Perhaps they will get it, but one remembers the fate of Darwin and Freud, and it is at least as likely that a Mass Blindness campaign will be waged against them.

*"Mass Observation." By Charles Madge and Tom Harrisson. Frederick Muller; 1s.

Superstition

"SALT, please!"

"Coming over!"

Toughley minor, passing the salt impetuously, upset it over Inkwell-Splashett's plate.

"Sorry, Splodge!"

But Inkwell-Splashett had leapt furiously to his feet.

"You nit-witted Nazi."

Toughley minor looked at him in surprise;

"All right—I said I was sorry. If you won't take it, you're a cow-brained Communist."

"Bringing me bad luck! Well, I shall have to do something...."

The next moment there was an uproar, occasioned by Inkwell-Splashett trying to turn his seat round three times. As it was a bench, accommodating five other hungry boys, the attempt was unsuccessful, and earned the censure of the master on duty.

"I never knew you were so supercilious," commented Blotting minimus afterwards.

"I suppose you just laugh at it," retorted the aggrieved one, "but how would you like to have seven years' bad luck?"

"That's when you smash a mirror," Toughley minor pointed out.

"I smashed a super mirror at my uncle's," said Jones, "and he said it would take seven years' pocket-money to pay for it."

"There you are!"

"D'you walk under ladders?"

"No!" exclaimed Inkwell-Splashett with a shudder.

"A chap stepped off the pavement at home because of a ladder," remarked Jenkins, "and I ran into him on my bike."

"Seems rather hard to keep on the safe side," said Toughley minor.

* * *

It was in the dormitory, after lights out, that the subject came up again.

"Have you seen the new moon?" whispered Blotting minimus.

"Yes," returned Inkwell-Splashett, "I've been on the look-out for it."

"What d'you do?" inquired Toughley minor, stepping lawlessly out of bed.

"First," directed the chief authority, "you mustn't see it through glass."

"That's easy," said Toughley minor, surveying the crescent from the open window.

"Then you turn your money."

"I haven't got it. It's in the school bank."

"Then that doesn't matter. You just bow three times."

"One—two—three. Then what happens?"

"Then you have good luck for the whole month."

"Not entirely," said Miss Dosem from the door. "Get back to bed at once, Toughley minor. You'll hear the rest of your good fortune from Mr. Deskworthy in the morning."

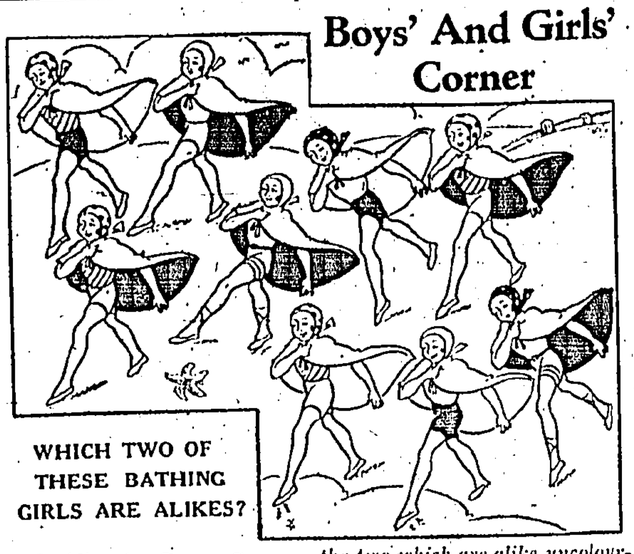
Boys' And Girls' Corner



WHICH TWO OF THESE BATHING GIRLS ARE ALIKES?

Dear Kiddies,

Lots of entries again this week—and most of them correct, too. I had a particularly hard job in selecting the winner from the Senior Section, but, after taking age and neatness of work into account, I have decided that the best effort in this class was forwarded by Vivian Rull (aged 12), 21 Jordan Road, Kowloon.

Joan Guimgam (aged 9), 71 Wong Nei Chong Road, wins the prize in the Junior Section.

Will the winners call at the "Telegraph" office for their prizes and for cards entitling them to free photos of themselves?

Now for the Merit Certificates. With so much good work, it wasn't too easy deciding to whom these should go, but here are the names of the recipients:

Seniors: Angela King, Alan Cutcher, Patsy Kotewall, Teddy Cropley, Maggie Alves, Eva Grady.

Juniors: Pinky Silva, Arthur Fisher, Dorothy Revie, Anthony Osmund, Tommy Li, Michael Harriman.

Commended for good work, but not quite up to Merit Certificate standard, are the following Seniors: Yvonne Cropley, Kenneth Meffan, Pamela Li, Sheik Charn Abbas, Maisie Reis, Lolly Rodrigues, Diana Hosking, Ada Manson, Mimi da Roza, Inez Remedios, Bonny Wilcox, Therese Azevedo, Rita Langston, Theresa da Roza, Olga Gutierrez, Jill Eager, Joyce Peters, Prudence Mayhew, Maria dos Remedios, Janet Wong, Hilda Silva, Leo Tavares, Jacqueline Anderson, Muriel Meffan, Fali Bejonjee, Yeung Kit-wa, Jose N. Souza, Charles Foster, Ada Foster, Margie Xavier, Peggy Barton, Laddie da Roza, Carmen Tavares, Doreen Mortimer, Cecilia Remedios, Norman Mc Queen, Vivian Elsie Pomeroy; and the following amongst the Juniors: George Hudson, Billy McMahon, Irene Osmund, Eileen Peters, Patricia Ozorio, Sylvia Xavier, Tootsie Garcia, Geraldina Ribeiro (Macao), Horacio Ozorio, Violetta dos Remedios, Vivian Becker, Laurence Becker, Mariam A. Curreem, Pamela Meyer, Daphne Griffith, Elizabeth Gittins.

Now, kiddies, this week I'm going to test your powers of observation in a very jolly competition. Shown in the picture are nine happy little bathing girls, who all look very alike. Actually, only two of them are dressed exactly the same. Can you find them?

When you think you have done so, colour all the other figures with paints or crayons, leaving the two which are alike uncoloured.

Two prizes will be awarded—one for children from 10 to 14 years, and the other for those under 10. These will be awarded on the basis of good colouring and correctness in choosing the correct two girls. Send me you entries, addressed to Uncle Eddie, c/o "Hongkong Telegraph," so as to reach me not later than 4 p.m. on Wednesday.

Besides the prizes, there will be an opportunity of winning Merit Certificates, and when you have collected six of these you will get an extra prize. Good luck, kiddies.

Uncle Eddie.

New Lamps For Old . . .

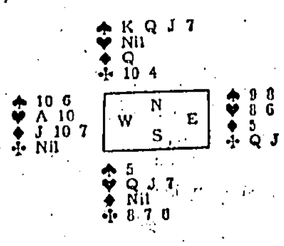
NOTHING collects dust more quickly than lampshades and they are such fragile things that you are apt to be a little afraid of cleaning them.

Velvet ones particularly get marked by the slightest thing. For the best way of cleaning them is to brush them lightly over with a hat brush, always brushing the same way, then steam them with a kettle and they will look as good as new.

Another simple way to make old shades look less forlorn is to get a new bit of fringe in some colour which will pick up a colour in your room, and stitch it round the bottom of the shade.

BRIDGE PROBLEM

NO. 14



Hearts are trumps. South leads and North-South must win five of the seven tricks.

Solutions by Wednesday to "Bridge Problem", Hongkong Telegraph, Wyndham Street.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 13.

Difficult at first glance, this amusing little problem was easier than generally imagined. However some intricate play was needed to fulfil the contract of four Diamonds. This is how it was done. To West's lead of Diamond King, North played Diamond 6, East Diamond 2, and South Diamond Ace. Thereafter the play went. South led 9 Hearts and won in North with Queen Hearts; North won third trick with Ace Hearts, South discarding small Spade. North led through Jack Hearts and South trumped with small Diamond. South led Queen Clubs, followed by small Club to North's Ace. North returned King Clubs and south discarded another small Spade. North put through low Spade taken over by South's Ace. South then led King Spade, and followed this at the 10th trick with Jack Spade. If West refused to trump with Diamond Queen, North takes tenth trick with Diamond Jack. If West trumps with Diamond Queen it leaves North's Jack good, or if West trumps in with a rag, North can over-trump.

SNOOKS has two children. His age in years exceeds the sum of their ages by 37.

The product of their ages, however, is twice the age of Snooks; and in five years' time the product of their ages will be four times the age of Snooks.

What is the age of Snooks, and what are the ages of his children?

"Why, the poor little thing is constipated. No wonder she's fretful. That is the chief thing a mother has to guard against, Mrs. Grant.

"Kiddies don't understand; they're so absorbed in their games, and often neglect Nature's call. Then they get bilious, lose their appetite and become irritable.

"Show me your tongue, Winnie. Yes, it is coated — a sure sign she's out of sorts. All she needs is 'California Syrup of Figs,' and she'll be as happy as a lark in the morning.

"You'll find it keeps the bowels regular, purifies the system and saves stomach upsets and biliousness.

"If children are to thrive and grow strong and keen witted, they must eat well and digest what they eat. There's no better way than the regular weekly dose of 'California Syrup of Figs.' All children love it.

"If I were you, I would send for a bottle now and give Winnie a dose at once.

"Be sure you insist on 'California Syrup of Figs,' Mrs. Grant. I am surprised that some mothers are ready to experiment with cheap and drastic preparations. It's such a pity they don't realize that 'California Syrup of Figs' is a perfectly safe children's laxative. I know myself how carefully and scientifically it is prepared."

CURATIVE VALUE OF BOOKS

MOST people realise that they do their reading for mental recreation, or as a sort of antidote to the dull business of earning one's living. But not many people, perhaps, have given the matter any more thought than this.

There is, however, a great deal in the curative value of books. My experience has been that there is a particular book or type of book that will rarely fail to cure a particular mental ailment.

I have a friend who has a collection of something like a thousand books. It is as wide an assortment as can be imagined. He looks round his shelves very much as a chemist might look round his shop. He claims that no matter how "blue" he might feel he has a book that will put him right.

After a particularly weary day spent in poring over the dull details of office routine, he makes no secret of the fact that his unfailing "refresher" is an hour with Hans Anderson's fairy tales. Leaving a world that is only too real, he lives for a time in one that is only too improbable.

Fond of "Thrillers"

It is not always true to say that men and women whose work is purely mental, should rest the mind as much as possible during their leisure hours. It is often far more refreshing to occupy the mind in a different manner.

Many men holding high and responsible positions in public life have confessed that a great deal of their leisure is spent in reading "thrillers." The late G. K. Chesterton, a profound and witty philosopher, was at the same time a voracious reader of boys' papers.

Manual workers and those whose work does not demand continuous brain-work, often find relaxation in studying subjects that require some intellectual effort. Railway workers have provided some amazing instances of achievements in intellectual fields. I myself know an engine-driver whose knowledge of the classics is uncanny. He can quote Virgil by the hour. And I once heard of a railway porter who was an authority on heraldry.

The Spell of History

Reading historical romances is another way of escape from a drab and colourless life. The appreciation of this fact is shown by the popularity of Jeffrey Farnol's novels.

Another type of book which is becoming increasingly popular among all classes, is the biography. It is a wonderful restorative to follow, in detail, a life completely different from your own. And it is still true that "the lives of great men all remind us, we can make our lives sublime."

But another, and unexpectedly stimulating kind of reading, is to be found in books written about ourselves. It is only during the last few years that novelists have produced books that describe, in photographic detail, the lives that the majority of readers live. J. B. Priestley, of course, is a master of this kind of writing—and curiously enough, writing about the thing seems to provide an escape from the thing itself. Or else it makes it appear much more tolerable.

The reason, I think, accounts for a great deal of the pleasures of reading—it is the love of seeing ourselves dramatised.

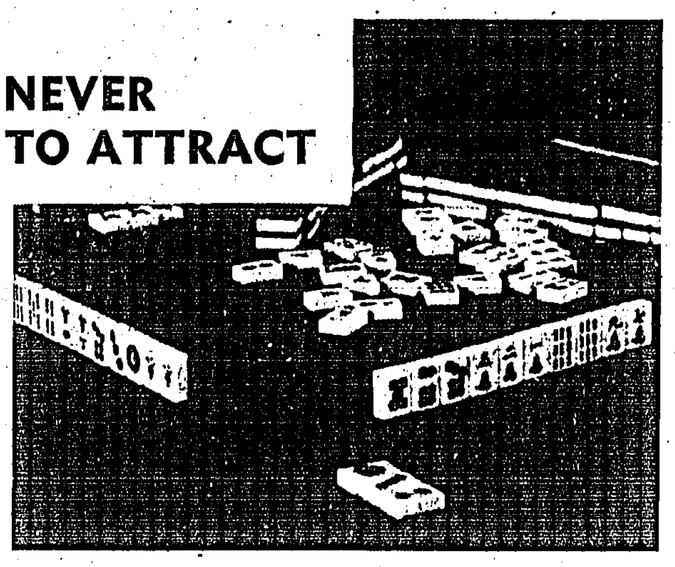
Some Popular Chinese Gambling Games

THE LURE OF FORTUNE NEVER FAILS TO ATTRACT



Gambling may be truly said to be everybody's vice; for we are all inherently gamblers at heart, and seek to woo Fortune in some way or other. Indeed, the lure of games of hazard is universal and intrigues every rank and condition of society, but it is in the Far East that gambling reaches the acme of multifarious complexity.

With many of the Oriental peoples, flirting with the Goddess of Chance attains the dignity of a national pastime as much indulged in and to as great an extent as betting on the races is amongst us. It is the Chinese, however, who hold the palm as the most inveterate and accomplished of all gamblers, and the games played by this extraordinary people are amongst the most interesting and fascinating of those devised by men. Indeed, the number and variety of Chinese gambling games are infinite, embracing every category of this form of diversion including cards, dominoes, limmerick puzzles, lotteries, etc.

Even in Hongkong, one may find ample evidence of the lure of Fortune, and although gambling has been illegal for several decades, yet many forms of it still flourish amidst the squalor of some of the lowlier tenements in the Chinese quarters of the Colony.

To discuss adequately the different types of games would require much more space than can be given in an article of this kind; hence, it is necessary to point out briefly the salient aspects of the more important games such as are met with locally. Some of these, it must be stated, lead a sub rosa existence and are officially prohibited.

Amongst those games which do not enjoy official sanction is that of po-piu. This game, however, is a favourite one amongst the citizens of Macao, and frequently there are accounts in the newspapers of runners who have been arrested for having in their possession tickets of the Macao po-piu establishments. These tickets bear upon their face a list of 120 different Chinese characters, of which number intending players may select any twelve. The characters chosen are then plainly marked by being dotted with ink, and if the correct number is drawn substantial prizes may be won. Indeed, po-piu is in reality a form of lottery, which on account of the low cost of the tickets (10c, 20c, 30c, and $1.00) has an unusual appeal amongst the Chinese masses, who hope that their ticket may be instrumental in securing a big win.

PAAK-KOP-PIU

There is another game, moreover, which is widely popular and flourishes in most Chinatowns in the United States and that is paak-kop-piu or "white pigeon ticket". In this type of game, the tickets are printed with the first eighty characters appearing in a famous Chinese school book of a generation since. This book, the "Thousand Character Classic", because of the fact that none of the ideographs are the same, has become a favourite one amongst gamesters and others who employ the contents as a sort of numerical system. Paak-kop-piu like po-piu is a form of lottery, and participants in the game mark any ten of the eighty characters, and any one who succeeds in guessing five or more obtains a prize of money determined, of course, by the amount paid for the tickets. Many Chinese, in order to enhance their chances of winning a lottery prize, will resort to a number of expedients, one of them being to have a child or other ignorant person to mark the ticket. There is, moreover, a special expedient which is said to seldom fail, and that is to mark a ticket on the occasion of one's birthday. This day is considered exceptionally auspicious, and the inference is that the choice made is almost certain to bring luck.

FAN-TAN

Perhaps the most engrossing of all Chinese gambling games, not excepting mah-jongg, of course, is fan-tan. The immense popularity of this game of hazards is attested by the fact that it is the leading attraction at Macao and was the one which was formerly licensed at Canton. Indeed, it is the usual mode of gaming on board ship amongst the Chinese steerage passengers, and is certainly the most popular game amongst those Chinese who go abroad. Fan-tan means literally "repeatedly spreading out" and in theory is one of the simplest of games of chance.

The method of play may be summed up as follows: A heap of either old-fashioned and highly polished "cash" called Kam-ts'in-tsai or broad beans termed ts'aan-tau is placed in the centre of a metal square known as t'aan-ching, the sides of which are marked with the Chinese numerals from one to four. The coins or beans are then covered with a metal cover or shallow brass cup called a t'aan-koi and the gamesters stake money on the number of cash which will remain after the cover is lifted and the heap counted out in fours by means of a slender wand-like stick known as a t'aan-p'aang, until the number left is either four, three, two or one.

Usually the amount of the average wager in an average session of fan-tan is small averaging a dollar or so. Occasionally, however, the players go in for big money, and then bets as high as $200 may be placed. Naturally the amount of losses will be a potent factor and this coupled with the levying of a 10 per cent. commission upon every sum paid out by the establishment as winnings enables a faan-t'aan-kwoon to carry out a successful and profitable business.

Usually the fan-tan gambling rooms are simply furnished, and have bare walls, except for a few texts on white paper tablets such as: Taai-shaat saam-fong—"May (everybody) have a great win on three sides." There is, of course, the table about four feet high covered with Canton matting, alongside of which is usually a railed space containing a high chair for the t'aan-kwoon or croupier. Besides this individual, there are a number of fakis known as the ngan-kwai or cashier and one or two others termed hoh-kwoon. These last act in the capacity of general clerks and oversee the gaming operations.

Unfortunately, however, the faan-t'aan-kwoon as the Chinese term these gaming establishments, become the rendezvous of many of the rowdy elements in society. There are, of course, the tsau-t'aan-laam or individuals who make fan-tan gambling their means of gaining a livelihood, and who, in order to gain the required funds to gamble, will resort to thieving and petty swindling. However, the most notorious of these habitues of the gambling houses are the loafers called mang-shaam-mei or "coat-tail tuggers" who frequent the establishments, way-lay the successful punters and importune them to give up a share of their winnings.

MAH JONGG

Mah-jongg, however, as is well-known, is the game par excellence. Its history and origin are not clear even to the Chinese. However, it is generally supposed to have had its origin in the province of Fukien, possibly in the reign of the Manchu Emperor Tao-kwang (1825-1850). At first, it was played only by the aristocratic Manchu officials and the bannermen who formed the garrison of every large Chinese city. Gradually, the game spread amongst the masses, and since the time of the Republic it has gradually attained the phenomenal popularity that it does to-day. Mah-jongg incidentally is the name given by Mr. J. P. Babcock, an American popularizer of the game during the years 1920-23 when the game became a craze throughout the United States. It may be noted here that the Cantonese term for mah-jongg is ma-tseuk which literally means "sparrow". Babcock is said to have coined the word mah-jongg from the prevailing Shanghai pronunciation of the Chinese name, a syllable which foreigners found most difficult. Undoubtedly, the new name from its ease in pronunciation did much to aid the game to become one of the greatest crazes ever experienced in the United States.

The drastic suppression of all forms of gambling in the province of Kwangtung has indirectly given a great fillip to mah-jongg playing in the Colony, inasmuch as the Chinese Government included this game amongst those banned. Hence, there has developed a new business of professional mah-jongg establishments. These places which are termed ma-tseuk-kwoon are sometimes facetiously dubbed "mah jongg schools", and have an immense popularity amongst certain sections of the Chinese population of the Colony. The operation of such establishments is upon a regular commission graded according to the amount of the proposed wagers. Partners can be had for playing at games whose stakes range as low as $4.00 to as high as $10.00. The fee, for the privilege of playing is, of course, collected in advance. For the convenience of the patrons, tea, coffee, cigarettes, and occasionally other refreshments are provided. For a time, kindred establishments of this type flourished in the foreign concession of Shameen until they were finally barred from operation altogether.

GUESSING ORANGE PIPS

Furthermore, the lure of games of chance extends even to such a prosaic event as purchasing fruit in the market. For example, a Chinese in buying the sweet, loose-skinned oranges, which incidentally are termed kom, will often like as not enter into a wager with the hawker as to the number of pips in the fruit. This is called kwoo-kom-wat (guessing the number of seeds within an orange), and according to the accepted rules of the "game", if one guesses correctly, one may have the fruit without paying.

The procedure is very simple. After an orange has been selected from a number in the hawker's basket and the wager laid, the skin is removed, and the pips from each section of the fruit are extracted with meticulous care and dropped into a small bowl and the number totalled. The question as to whether the customer shall have his fruit for nothing or must reimburse the hawker is settled by the nearest equivalent in the total of the pips to the sum previously wagered.

Another type of guessing game is that known as chuc-yuk-piu or "pork ticket". This is very common in the interior of the province, at the approach of Chinese New Year, and like the above is exceedingly simple. Pieces of pork—are—hung up in a stall, and people are invited to guess the weight. Those who wish to participate are, of course, required to purchase a ticket for a small sum. The guesses are entered into a book with the name of the person, and at the end of a fixed period, the pieces of pork are taken down and weighed. Those who guessed the weight receive the pieces as a prize.

Likewise, betting on the outcome of a fight between a pair of crickets is a very common mode of gambling. The insects are placed in a crockery bowl or small wooden tub and goaded to attack each other by being titillated with a feather. These miniature combats, which are termed ta-chik-chit in the vernacular, are in reality ferocious struggles to the death and the insect warriors give no quarter. Formerly such exhibitions were in great favour amongst the masses and large sums were often wagered on the tiny champions.

Such is a general idea of some of the more usual type of gambling games prevailing amongst the Chinese masses. The trend of the present day, however, is towards a general movement for the complete suppression of the vice, and the future may see this phase of Chinese life entirely eliminated.

Mrs. Freer Beats Ban: Going To Sydney Soon

'SECRET PAST IS JUST A MYTH'

Sydney, June 8.

MRS. M. M. FREER, niece by marriage of the late Viscount Cave, was to-day given permission to enter Australia, after being forbidden to land last October.

Mr. T. Patterson, Australian Minister of the Interior, banned Mrs. Freer on the ground that she had become "entangled" in India with a twenty-six-year-old Australian Army officer, Lieutenant Dewar.

To-day Mr. Page, Australia's acting Prime Minister, said that, "In view of all the circumstances, the ban would be lifted.

Mrs. Freer spoke to me over the radio telephone from Wellington, New Zealand, where she has lived since the ban.

"I am feeling on top of the world," she said. "I do not contemplate taking action against Mr. Paterson. I prefer to think he is a frightened soul hiding behind a portfolio.

"At last your Government is convinced I am not a drug runner or a white-slaver. I congratulate Mr. Paterson on keeping me out so long. He has had his pound of flesh. Now I can land at Sydney without worrying. I am not a woman with a deadly secret past as was hinted unkindly in Mr. Paterson's mythical disclosures."

Mrs. Dewar Surprised

Mrs. Freer is going to Sydney as soon as possible to stay with friends.

Acting-Premier Page explained that the Cabinet's decision followed letters from Mr. Barnett, a Wellington solicitor, declaring the continuance of the ban unjust.

"Mr. Freer has been a New Zealand resident for eight months. The Cabinet is therefore not taking steps to prohibit her landing," said Mr. Page.

Lieutenant Dewar was transferred to Perth on Tuesday. To-night he declared he had no idea if he would see Mrs. Freer when she came to Australia.

This was Mrs. Dewar's comment:

"Whether Mrs. Freer is coming to Australia or not I intend following a certain course of action. I am surprised at the Cabinet's decision."

CHARLES LAUGHTON IN U.S. TAX DRIVE

Washington, June 8.

A BIG drive against super-taxpayers has been started by the United States Treasury, and to-day many distinguished names appear on a list of persons against whom millions of dollars are being claimed.

Well-known film stars, financiers, and other prominent people figure on the list, among them being the following:—

Charles Chaplin Film Corporation (Delaware)	£ 5,099
Charles Laughton	20,886
Bing Crosby Inc.	31,962
Eddie Cantor	3,074
Max Schmeling	737
P. A. Rockefeller Estate	1,564,525.
Edith Rockefeller McCormick Estate (Miss Rockefeller, daughter of John D., married and divorced, Harold McCormick, multimillionaire tractor manufacturer)	88,635
Fritz Kreisler	26,062
Z. S. Reynolds' Estate (Mr. Reynolds, the boy tobacco millionaire, who was the husband of Miss Libby Holman, was found shot in 1933. Miss Holman's four-year-old son inherited £1,200,000)	1,704,164
George F. Baker (Gift Taxes) (Mr. Baker, head of the First National Bank of New York, one of the largest in the United States, was operated on in mid-Pacific last Friday, the ship being stopped for three hours)	49,364

It is emphasised that this income-tax drive has been in progress for nine months and that no special emphasis is placed on specific cases.—United Press.

Coal Wrapped In Cellophane Is Latest For The Home

Chicago, June 10.

You no longer need to put on your over-alls to shovel coal into the furnace. You can even go down to the basement in your starched bosom shirt, still keeping on your white kid gloves after the party and satisfactorily handle the coal situation with never a smear or smutch.

Coal is now neatly put up in blocks and wrapped in cellophane like Christmas presents. It is piled up in orderly rows near the furnace door as compactly and evenly as short lengths of wood once were heaped up on the back porch for the old-time kitchen stove.

Moreover, in Chicago and several eastern cities, these cellophane packages are delivered to your door by men dressed in white uniforms driving white trucks as though they might be members of the whipped cream or frozen dainty brigade. They step down the back cellar steps with the greatest of courtesy and noiselessly deposit the ribbonless packages at the most convenient angle to the furnace door.

Cellophane packaged coal was exhibited at the National House and Garden Exposition held here recently. Under an artificial blue sky within the Coliseum, a model seven-room brick colonial house was built with several exhibit gardens and various displays of every kind of building materials. The exposition was sponsored by the building and home equipment manufacturers for the benefit of home-planners.

ROYAL BABY'S YELLS ARE BROADCAST

Rome, June 4.

ALL Italy listened to the broadcast cries of the three-month-old Prince Victor Emmanuel of Naples, son of the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Piedmont, when he was christened in the Royal Palace chapel to-day.

The baby prince was carried into the chapel by the Duchess of Mont Albano, with the Queen and Princess Marie Jose, dressed all in white, walking beside him.

King Victor Emmanuel stepped down from the special throne to act as godfather.

The prince was silent as he was borne in solemn procession into the chapel. He paid no attention to the glittering uniforms or the chanting of the choir.

But when Mgr. Giuseppe Beccaria, the King's chaplain, dipped the golden spoon into the lustral water and poured it over his brow he broke into loud screams.

Queen Elena of Italy tried in vain to pacify the baby as the priest pronounced the eleven names chosen—Vittorio Emanuele Alberto Carlo Teodoro Umberto Bonifacio Amedeo Damiano Bernardino Maria.

The service continued to the accompaniment of a crescendo of yells which, echoed through thousands of homes receiving the all-station broadcast.—Reuter.

£3,656 FOR BARRETT LETTERS

NEARLY 50 years after the death of Robert Browning, the letters of his bride, Elizabeth Barrett, of Wimpole Street, with whom he eloped, were sold at Sotheby's recently for £3,656.

The collection belonged to Lieutenant-Colonel Harry P. Moulton Barrett, of Bideford.

A batch of letters to her brother George fetched £340. In these Elizabeth broke the news of her elopement and marriage to Browning. She forgot the day of the week and started: "Thursday or Friday."

Bidding for letters written to Sister Arabel rose from £100 to £950, when they were bought by Messrs. Quaritch.

The original manuscript of "The Battle of Marathon," Elizabeth's first published work when she was a child, sold for £300.

War Tanks Of Caesar's Legions Found

MAN-PROPELLED AND ARMOURED MACHINE

Paris, June 10.

War tanks are not new means of defence, it was proved, when, near Beauvais, a member of the Archeological Society of France unearthed a tank dating back to the Romans.

While unearthing a bridge, built some 2,000 years ago near this town, which for centuries was the scene of innumerable battles, M. Matherat came upon the debris of a war machine, resembling a covered, armoured cart which Caesar's legions used in their battles. They called it a "Vined," or rolling barrack, and it was formerly used in the same way as tanks are used to-day.

This tank was man-propelled and its construction, although being less resistant than that of modern tanks, nevertheless, was sufficiently strong to resist the warfare of the time. Also, a collection of ammunition, including arrowheads, stones and pieces of iron, was found inside the tank.

Other discoveries were made by Matherat in the course of his excavations and the most important are the ruins of the Roman bridge which was built by Labienus, one of Julius Caesar's lieutenants, about 51 B.C. This bridge, was built entirely of wood and it is in a good state of preservation, having been covered by 10 feet of soil following an earthquake in the 5th century.

For many years, Matherat had been aware of the existence of this bridge, buried somewhere near Beauvais, and only after careful research was he able to disclose it.

A horseshoe, pieces of Roman armour and many projectiles also were among the discoveries made in this same region by the explorer.—United Press.

THERE IS HELIUM IN PLENTY

CAN BE USED IN FUTURE FOR AIRSHIPS

New Orleans.

There is a sufficient supply of helium in the Texas Panhandle to float the world's airships without endangering America's monopoly of the non-inflammable gas, remarked Ernest O. Thomson, Chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission.

Use of the gas aboard the Hindenburg would have prevented disaster that claimed 35 lives.

Thomson is chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission. His home is Amarillo, in the Texas Panhandle—site of the only commercial helium plant, located on a 50,000-acre government gas field reserve.

"Of course, I wouldn't want helium to be made available to other nations for military purposes and I don't believe anybody else would," Thomson said. "Since the Akron and the Macon crashed, there has been practically no outlet at all for the gas. There are more than a million acres of helium-bearing gas in the Texas Panhandle."

Naval experts estimate that the Amarillo reservoir from which helium-bearing natural gas is extracted, has a potential of 12,000,000,000 cubic feet of helium. That is enough, they say, to float 100 airships the size of the former Hindenburg continuously for 100 years. Present production facilities would provide 24,000,000 cubic feet of helium a year.

Helium has 90 per cent. the lifting power of hydrogen, will not burn, and does not leak so rapidly through fabric. Its once prohibitive price was reduced by the government to $11 per thousand cubic feet. The non-inflammable gas is produced by liquefying natural gas at 2,000 pounds per square inch. Helium, which does not liquefy, floats free.

Since destruction of the navy's last two commissioned dirigibles, virtually no helium has been produced at the Amarillo plant. The U. S. Army's non-rigid airships require only small quantities of the gas.

Thomson, whose railroad commission administers oil control in Texas, said the oil states compact again would try to induce Louisiana—fourth largest oil-producing state—to join.

Thomson said the experience of Louisiana's new deep drilling would be of benefit to sister states. Some 30 officials from Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas and Illinois might be present.—United Press.

1,816,000 CARS IN BRITAIN BY AUGUST 31

MANUFACTURERS PREDICTION

SALES PEAK YEAR

The Statistical Department of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders predicts that 1937 will be a peak year for the motor industry.

In the "Home Market Analysis No. 11" (21s.), just published, the forecast is made that the total number of private cars on the road will exceed 1,750,000, and that sales will reach a figure exceeding 330,000.

Previous forecasts made by the Society have shown a high degree of accuracy. The exact peak figure forecast for 1937 is 1,816,000 car licences current at August 31.

10 H.P. LEADS THE WAY

The analysis shows that in the sales of private cars the highest percentage held by individual horse power was that of the 10 h.p. They gained 27.87 per cent. of the total private car market, and the whole group of cars up to 10 h.p. held practically 60 per cent. of the total market.

There was a considerable gain in the number of 12 h.p. cars sold in 1936 compared with 1935, the increase being 10,000. The 14 h.p. cars also increased in total sales by nearly 8,000.

A table gives the number of private cars in use per thousand persons in each licensing district in the country. The figures are based on the estimated resident population at the middle of 1935. In England as a whole there were 38.1 private cars per 1,000 persons. In Surrey the figure was 68.2 and in Yorkshire 28.7. For London the figure was 32.0 and for Middlesex 50.8.

The analysis includes all classes of commercial vehicles as well as private cars and motor bicycles. Heavy oil vehicles in use were still increasing in numbers in 1936, though the rate of increase was less rapid than in the previous year.

The apparent wastage of private cars in the United Kingdom for 1935 was 100,175, for 1936 132,072, and the forecast for 1937 is 149,000.

This Home Market Analysis is a very fine piece of statistical work. It contains a mass of information of value to motor manufacturers and dealers of all kinds, and is a good example of the work done for the industry by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders.

Don't Get GASSED as you DRIVE

T. H. WISDOM advises the Motorist

A DEADLY gas may be responsible for many unexplained accidents on the highway.

The attention of the whole nation is focused on this problem of road-accidents. The best brains are seeking a solution, thousands and thousands of pounds have been spent; special police forces have been formed; roads are being rebuilt, though slowly; nearly everything that human ingenuity can devise has been examined and tested. Except one thing—carbon-monoxide poisoning. Here is a new line on our biggest national problem; one that has, so far, been neglected.

Carbon-monoxide poisoning may not be responsible for any road accidents, but it may be responsible for a few. We know, too well, that neglect of the elementaries of driving and riding and walking is the reason for most road casualties.

But two doctors, one in Italy and one in London, tell me definitely that carbon-monoxide poisoning affects far more people than know it. Both told me that they have had cases of motorists with some strange (to the patient) illness traced by blood tests eventually to carbon-monoxide poisoning.

❖ ◇ ❖

Here is one concrete case, known to me. A man, the owner of rather an elderly saloon car, suffered, at first, from recurrent headaches and sleepiness, while driving. It became so bad that eventually he had to stop his car two or three times on a long journey and rest. He had sudden fainting fits while he was at home—fortunately never while he was driving.

He went to a doctor. Carbon-monoxide poisoning was the verdict. His car was examined—the exhaust system was leaking and discharging the gases inside the car.

Not long ago a well-known motor writer was pulled from his stationary car unconscious.

Supposing either of those men had fainted while at the wheel? Would it have been just another of those mysterious accidents, of which we read every now and then? Sometimes a car goes off the road for no apparent reason, or swerves into other traffic. And, if the driver escapes with his life, often he remembers nothing at all of those important few moments immediately before the crash.

The symptoms of carbon-monoxide poisoning are extremely like those of drunkenness. Doctors sometimes have a job in telling the difference. I wonder how many "drunken" drivers had really been poisoned by their cars?

Carbon-monoxide is all the more deadly because it is odourless and colourless. You can smell and see the burned oil discharged from the exhaust pipe—but that isn't carbon-monoxide. That's its big danger—you can't smell it and you can't see it.

It affects some people more than others. In the early stages you get a headache, then you feel sick. Another few minutes and everything may suddenly "go black," and you're "out."

And for that reason it is tremendously dangerous to run a car engine in a closed garage. Many people have lost their lives doing this very thing.

That is a danger well known and guarded against by intelligent folk. But few people realise the danger of riding in a closed car that is, slowly, being filled with that insidious gas from a leaking exhaust system.

The trouble is that the average exhaust system of a car has four joints—one at the junction of engine and exhaust manifold, another at the end of the engine manifold and the others where the pipe enters and leaves the silencer. That provides four possible "leaks"—the gas, instead of being discharged harmlessly into the atmosphere at the rear of the car, finds its way, via loose floor-boards or clutch and brake pedal slots, inside the body.

A new car rarely, if ever, suffers. A well-designed exhaust system, as on all the well-known 1937 models, discharges the products of combustion in the right place.

But hundreds of old cars at this very moment are injecting carbon-monoxide into their drivers and passengers.

In half an hour one day I counted ten cars, all saloons, with visibly leaking exhaust pipes, as they stopped in a traffic block in Piccadilly. In Paris I spotted 30, many of them taxis, in the same period.

So watch out for leaking gaskets. Never drive with windows closed. And, if you suffer from headaches while driving, have a good look at the exhaust system of your car.

The British Medical Association, I believe, has examined this problem, but has not told the motoring public of its seriousness—if it is. Doctors—at least those two I have seen—seem to realise the danger.

❖ ◇ ❖

Is there not a clear case for the Ministry of Transport, medical men and motor manufacturers to get together and decide whether or not this is a problem worthy of attention?

The Automobile Association, with whom I discussed the matter, said that they had received a number of complaints from members of lassitude and illness while driving which, on examination by A.A. engineers, had been traced to faulty exhaust pipes.

Now the last thing I want to do is to frighten anyone unnecessarily. Motoring is safe enough as long as elementary precautions are observed.

So, particularly if you drive an old car, go over the entire exhaust system of your car and make certain there are no leaks.

Wife and "Perfect Husband's" Secret

A wife told the South Essex coroner that in 1930 her husband returned from France after having been found shot with a revolver by his side, and she added:

"He never told me what had happened, and I respected his reticence. We were perfectly happy—he was a perfect husband."

The inquest, held at Romford, was on Alexander Robert Baxter, of Highroad, Chadwell Heath, who died in hospital on March 10 from the effects of the 1930 wound.

The coroner, Mr. L. F. Beccle, said that the French police had stated that a revolver was found close by when Baxter was discovered wounded.

Mr. Beccle said it was clear that any suicidal intention had been completely exhausted, and he recorded a verdict of Death by Misadventure.

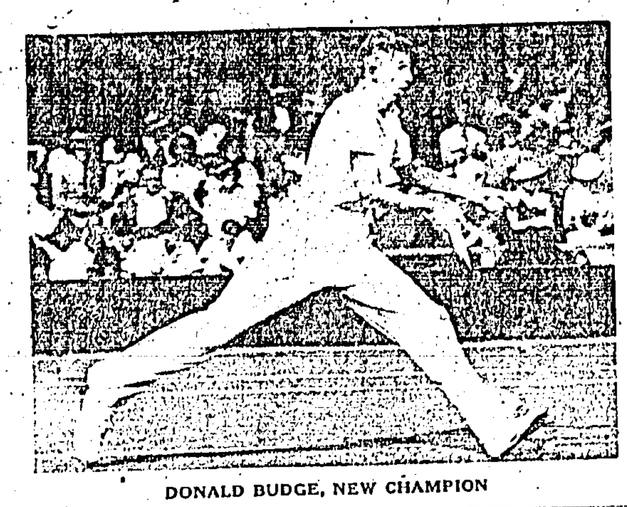
HOW DONALD BUDGE TRIUMPHED OVER VON CRAMM



DONALD BUDGE, NEW CHAMPION

TO-DAY AT WIMBLEDON

DOROTHY ROUND'S BIG OPPORTUNITY

Should Win Championship Again This Afternoon

(By "Veritas")

Ever since 1931, Mlle. Jadwiga ("Yaya" to her friends) Jedrzejowska, undisputed woman champion tennis player of Poland for eight years, has, like many another aspiring player, sought for one prize—the women's singles championship of Wimbledon. Year after year she has become more and more insistent and dangerous in her challenges. In 1934 she reached the quarter-finals: in 1935 she was knocked out at the same stage by Miss Helen Jacobs: last year she advanced as far as the semi-final, and once again fell before the racket of Miss Jacobs.

This afternoon, when she walks on to the Centre Court, half of her ambition, at least, will be realised. She will take the court as finalist in the women's singles championship, pitted against Miss Dorothy Round, Britain's leading player, and erstwhile winner of the title.

Never very seriously taken by the critics, Mlle. Jedrzejowska has, by concentrated effort, attained a position in the world of tennis which entitles her to be named among the first half a dozen players. Her progress has been measured: there has been none of the meteoric ascendancy of a Miss Stammers, or Betty Nuthall or Margaret Scriven, and therefore she has suffered none of the undignified reverses destined to be the lot of her more brilliant, but less methodical contemporaries.

SERIOUS PROPOSITION

This makes Mlle. Jedrzejowska all the more a serious proposition for Miss Round this afternoon. She has slowly but surely matured her play until now it has carried her through to the final of the Wimbledon championship. To get there she has had to overcome, among others, Miss Alice Marble, champion of the United States, and Miss Margaret Scriven, conqueror of Kay Stammers. That she accomplished both tasks without the loss of a set serves only to emphasise that she is a player of considerable importance and potentialities.

Mlle. Jedrzejowska first came into the limelight of tennis by winning the Polish championship as far back as 1929. In 1931 she represented her country in the French Championship and took a set from Miss Ryan. In the same year she won the Polish title again and competed without great distinction, but with credit, at Wimbledon, also as accredited representative of Poland. In the following year she competed on the Riviera and won the singles at Cannes, and later finished runner-up in the Berlin championship, losing to Helen Jacobs, who has invariably proved too good for her.

In 1932 she won the London Covered Court Championship, as well as the Welsh singles and doubles, and the following year she was "seeded" at Wimbledon. In 1934 she represented Poland at Wimbledon and in the same year won the Austrian singles and doubles championships. In this year she reached the fourth round at Wimbledon, losing then to Miss Sarah Palfrey (now Mrs. Fabyan).

In the course of several less important tournaments, however, she has beaten Helen Jacobs, Fraulein Horn, Mlle. Henrotin of France, Betty Nuthall, Susan Noel, Mlle. Adamoff of France, and Dorothy Round.

She is therefore well fitted to appear as finalist to-day, and although Miss Round is fairly certain to start favourite, the English girl will have to be at peak form to win.

MANY FINE QUALITIES

Mlle. Jedrzejowska has many fine qualities as a tournament player: a strong fighting spirit with the will to win, and an array of sound, rather than brilliant strokes, with a chopped backhand which has brought about the downfall of many a player. She is an admirable baseliner, and while she can engage her opponent in that type of play, is more likely to win than lose.

Nevertheless if Dorothy Round can continue to play as well as she has throughout the past twelve days, the title should become hers again, after a lapse of two years. Apparent-

WAS BRILLIANT AFTER SHAKY BEGINNING

German Out Of Touch

ONE hour and five minutes after he had walked on to the Centre Court at Wimbledon yesterday, Donald Budge, lanky, red-haired Californian, was being acclaimed the new amateur tennis champion of the world.

Budge scored a striking victory over Baron Gottfried von Cramm in the final match, winning the opening set at 6-3 the second at 6-4 and the third at 6-2. Thus, for the third successive year, von Cramm reached the final only to be turned back. His two previous defeats were at the hands of Fred Perry.

Budge's victory in three sets makes 1937 the fourth year in succession that the men's singles final has been won without the loss of a set. In 1934 Perry beat Crawford 6-3, 6-0, 7-5. In 1935 Perry beat von Cramm 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 and last year Perry again beat von Cramm 6-1, 6-1, 6-0.

VON CRAMM LOSES CONTROL

London, July 2.

Queen Mary joined a large crowd at the Centre Court, Wimbledon, today, to see Donald Budge gain a surprisingly easy win over G. von Cramm, contesting his third successive men's singles final.

After 65 minutes play, Budge had won by 6-3, 6-4, 6-2. The American started shakily and von Cramm went to two-love, but then his shots began to go out of court and Budge quickly asserted himself and polished off the set with the loss of but one more game.

Playing with rare confidence, Budge went to 3-1 in the second set, but ran up against an improved von Cramm for three games and was trailing 3-4. However, with Budge playing brilliantly, he found winners whenever he liked, and in the third set von Cramm could only win the second and seventh games.

G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey, holders of the men's doubles championship, had an easy win over Roderick Menzel and L. Hecht of Czechoslovakia in the semi-final. The Englishmen won 6-2, 6-2, 6-4. Menzel experienced an off-day and could do nothing right. The winners played splendid tennis.

The English pair, Mrs. King and Mrs. Pittman followed up their victory over Miss Stammers and Miss James by beating Mrs. Andrus of America and Mlle. Henrotin of France in the semi-final of the women's doubles.—Reuter.

CRICKET ADVOCATED FOR AMERICANS

New York City.

America would be a better nation if it possessed a national sport with the standards of cricket. Such is the opinion of the Reverend Elmore McNeill McKee, who told his congregation that in a recent sermon. Character, discipline, and conscience would be instilled by such a sport, the rector maintained.

"Many of the nation's best lessons are learned on its playing field," he asserted. "We as a people would benefit greatly if we possessed a national game with the standards of the Englishman's cricket.

"Cricket came into existence at a time of widespread corruption and banditry.

"It became the conscience of the people, passed on from generation to generation.

"A player never questions the decision of the umpire. The player whose character is in question can never represent his country," he declared.

AMATEUR OARSMEN: BAN LIFTED

The Committee of the Amateur Rowing Association and the stewards of Henley Regatta have agreed to eliminate from the definition of an amateur oarsman the clause which excludes mechanics, artisans and others engaged in manual labour. The alteration will take effect as from Jan. 1, 1938.

Other clauses of the rule remain, so that professionals in other forms of sport or wage-earners "in or about boats" are still barred.

WHY HENRY COTTON'S CHALLENGE WAS REFUSED

MYSTERY MAN OF GOLF EXPLAINS

By Jack Guenther
United Press Staff Correspondent

Hollywood.

John Montague, the mystery man of golf, has spurned an offer of $2,500 to play Henry Cotton of England with the decisive declaration that he doesn't need money, has no ambition to become a tournament golfer and is damn tired of attempts to lure him into the open.

Breaking his long silence to answer an offer of £500 to defeat Cotton in London in a 73-hole match with conditions to be arranged, the heralded Paul Bunyan of the fairways said simply he never will play in a public tournament, and offered the following advice:

Henry Cotton ha dbetter devote all concentration on winning the British open at Carnoustie and Montague wishes him the best of luck."

The Beefy golfer rubbed a heavy hand over his thick curly hair and explained that the offer—which came from a British publication—was simply one of a hundred that have poured in from all parts of the world.

"I have never challenged any player, I have never boasted of what I could do or have done. All I ask is to be let alone.

"I am told that an American sports magazine shortly will publish an editorial asking that I come out in the open and play in at least one tournament 'for the good of the game.'

REASON WHY HE WON'T

"The reason—I won't play—is this: I have no need for money.

Although I have won high stakes playing golf I have never made a penny of it. In fact, I have made it a point to spend every cent.

"Secondly, I have no ambition to play in a tournament. Golf with me is a recreation, not competition. It is said that the professionals win hollow victories inasmuch as that I could beat them. I never have said that I could beat them and I don't believe this is true.

"There is nothing for me to gain by playing in such a tournament. If I win I haven't won anything because I don't care how good I am. If I lost there wouldn't be anything settled either. So that is my standpoint, and that is why I won't play against Cotton or anyone else."

Montague was cornered at the lakeside country club, he has been playing for almost four years and which is the most exclusive golf course in the film colony.

Despite his simple statement that he may or may not be a good golfer, the husky, red-faced player is surrounded by an awesome reputation among even his fellow players, who hotly disagree as to his prowess. Some say he is the greatest golfer in the world, others say no, and the third group contend that if he is good, they have never seen him achieve his publicized feats. Most of them agree, however, that he is the most powerful driver in the game.

TUCKEY QUITTING BIG TENNIS

English Player Leaving Army For Engineering

Raymond Tuckey is leaving big lawn tennis. It has been known some time that he is leaving the Army (he is stationed at Catterick in Yorkshire) for the engineering profession, but recently at the Stade Roland Garros he said that it would mean his leaving international lawn tennis.

He had little to devote to it while in the Army, but he would have none in the future.

Tuckey is regarded as the probable No. 2 singles player as well as a doubles player with Pat Hughes in the coming Davis Cup challenge round.

Afterwards he will not be available and he will be a big loss to British tennis.

Hare To Play In Davis Cup

SUCCESSOR TO PERRY

BRITISH TEAM CHOSEN

CHARLES E. HARE

After some eight months of speculation among the critics as to who would fill Fred Perry's place in the British Davis Cup team, the L.T.A. yesterday announced its decision. Charles E. Hare, the young London player has been chosen. He will play second string singles to H. W. Austin.

Reuter says that the following team will defend the Cup on the Centre Court at Wimbledon at the end of July:—

H. W. Austin (No. 1 singles)

C. E. Hare (No. 2 singles)

G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey (doubles).

Mr. H. Roper Barrett will, it is believed, again assume duties of non-playing captain.

The selection of Charles Hare comes as no surprise, as he was always in the running. However, had Tuckey beaten Jiro Yamagishi in the Beckenham final last month, it is generally believed that he would have been chosen as second singles, with Hare and Frank Wilde playing doubles.

Among other possible candidates for selection were Frank Wilde, D. W. Butler, Eric J. Filby and C. M. Jones. However, Hare's achievement at Wimbledon in reaching the fourth round and taking Henkel to five sets made him fairly certain for the vacancy.

Hare, who is London-born, will celebrate his 22nd birthday on July 16. He has had a typical career on the tennis courts. Won British Junior Championship in 1931 and represented England against Scotland in 1934. Was also nominated British player in France and in 1934 won the South of England doubles title and the Welsh doubles championship. A broken ankle in 1935 interrupted his career, but since recovering from this indisposition, has made rapid and impressive progress towards stardom. Is tall and slim, and boasts a sound game. He is quite capable of beating either Grant of America or Henkel of Germany.

Science Brings Aid To Golfers

"TEAR DROP" CLUB

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington.

Science tapped the American golfer on the shoulder to-day and presented him with the ultimate implement potent for pounding the pellet around that way better; it is a tear drop golf club, streamlined like a movie blonde on an 18-day diet (or a railroad train), designed to swing through the air with the greatest of ease, and guaranteed to give the ball such a wallop as no ball ever had before.

This development in dynamic golf is the invention of Sylvan J. Crooker, who plays at Leesburgh Va., but doesn't grieve over the size of his score. He takes steps.

Like all other golfers everywhere, Crooker knew in the beginning that there was nothing wrong with his playing. His form was perfect. His follow-through was superb, when he'd swing his club, it would whistle like a banshee. That showed the way he hit.

HOW IT WAS WORKED OUT

The trouble with score, he divined, must necessarily be in his tools. First, he considered the balls, which he bought (and lost) by the dozen. These little white spheroids seemed to be perfect. Doped with hydrogen, nitrogen, oxygen, and dynamite (for all he knew) they seemed to have all the pep that any golfer could desire.

Then he considered clubs, which he owned in profusion. He had niblicks and spoons and knives and forks and whatnot, some with wooden shafts and some with spun platinum (it seemed like when he paid for 'em).

Some of these shafts were rigid like a zep. Some were flexible like a snake. Some had square heads, some round, and some convoluted like a non-skid tyre. Crooker tried them all and he tried them some more, until his arms were sore. Something, somewhere was wrong.

What could it be? Crooker took to listening to his clubs scream as they cut the air. The noise they made was perfect, according to all the golf books.

It was while pondering this phenomenon one hot afternoon on the seventh tee, that his inspiration, like a flash, came to him. The books were wrong! Golf clubs oughtn't to do any screaming!

This unnecessary racket meant that energy, which should have been imparted to the ball, was being wasted.

THE REST WAS SIMPLE

The rest was simple. Crooker merely built a stream-lined golf club, the head of which is in the shape of a falling tear. It is big in front and tapers off in the rear so that it goes through the air with the minimum of whistle-and resistance.

Ordinary, whistling golf clubs travel at the rate of around 100 miles an hour when they hit the ball. Crooker's streamlined club travels maybe 110 miles.

It gets results, too; such results that he had his new kind of golf club patented, number 2,083,189 and even now golfers are beating a path to his door.

HARLEQUINS LEAVE TWICKENHAM

Famous Rugger Club To Seek New Ground

London.

Harlequins, whose name has been linked automatically with Twickenham for more than 20 years, may move to a new ground next season.

The club would like to secure the ground at Hampton, which Rosslyn Park were unable to obtain.

The reason for the proposed removal is that club members consider Twickenham too big for them. Their usual 2,000 or 3,000 spectators look lost in Twickenham's wide spaces.

MONEY NEEDED

Another reason for the probable departure is that Harlequins' members would like to have a ground and club house of their own to entertain visiting sides.

Money will be needed, of course, for the new ground, and one method of raising it may be the sale of the ground used by the "Quins" junior sides at Teddington. It is believed that this would realise £5,000.

It is unlikely, if Harlequins leave Twickenham, that any other club side will play there. The Rugby Union receives only £300 a year in rent from the "Quins" and the loss of that amount would hardly worry them.

It is the Union's intention, it is understood, to use Twickenham for representative matches only.

Owing to the indisposition of W. McLeod, F Nolan and McLeod defaulted to S. Eccleshall and A. W. Grimmitt, who thus enter the fourth round.

It is the wish of the Sub-Committee that in the event of rain, competitors will try their best to play their ties on the greens allotted before July 9 so that the draw for the quarter-finals may be made on that date.

If a competitor is ill, he is requested to inform his opponent and the green-ranger of the Club at which his match is arranged. Should a tie not be completed on this account on the evening before the next round, is drawn, the match shall be awarded to his opponent.

It was stated at yesterday's meeting that the draw of the preliminary round of the singles will be made on July 9.

LETTER DISCUSSED

A letter from Mr. B. Basto suggesting the appointment of umpires was read to the meeting by Mr. C. B. Hosking, Secretary, and discussed by the meeting. The following statement was issued:

"Regarding the appointment of umpires, the Committee was unanimously of the opinion that in the cases of pairs and rinks, it was not considered necessary to appoint official umpires until the semi-final stage, it being felt that the players themselves were fully competent of dealing with any infringement of rules by their opponents.

"In regard to the singles the Committee welcomed the letter from Mr. Basto and decided, again unanimously, to have all singles games umpired. In an endeavour to overcome obvious difficulties in this respect, they will request the conveners of various clubs at which the competitions are held to do their utmost to provide umpires for the preliminary rounds.

"Umpires thus provided will have the official authority of the Association.

"In the latter stages of the competition, umpires will be appointed by the Sub-Committee."

Miss Dorothy Round

DOROTHY ROUND'S OPPORTUNITY

ly the English girl has run right into her stride as witness smashing victories over Helen Jacobs and Mme. Mathieu during this week. Indications are that she is hitting with more severity and also greater accuracy than at any time during the past few months, and that she has now worked herself into best form.

Miss Round will be expected to win, but it won't be done easily.

PEIPING PREPARING FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Training Class Will Be Opened For Delegates

Peiping, June 25.

Under the auspices of the Bureau of Social Welfare in the Peiping Municipality a summer training class will be opened for local Chinese men and women athletes who aspire to represent this city of the National Athletic Meet which is to open at Nanking on October 10.

Registration for the class opened on June 10 and will close to-day. Up to the present 128 athletes have registered and it was anticipated that this number would have increased to 200.

On July 1 the selection committee will begin the task of selecting the candidates for the various track, and field, tennis, volleyball, football, basketball and baseball teams to represent Peiping. The successful candidates will undergo training throughout the summer months. Peiping hopes to be able to capture several championships at the National Meet in October.

D.S.O. DOCTOR STRUCK OFF

WOMAN CHARGES

ALLEGED ADULTERY WHILE TREATING COMPLAINANT'S SON

On the grounds that he committed adultery with a woman who brought her son to him for treatment, the General Medical Council in London recently decided to erase from the medical register the name of Irish-born Dr. Douglas Chetham Pim, D.S.O., registered of Brecon-road, Abergavenny, Mon., practising lately at Steeple Clayton, Buckinghamshire.

Dr. Pim, described as "a man of high professional attainments," denied there was ever any professional relationship between himself and Mrs. Annie Alma Ferguson, the complainant, and her family.

Mr. Valetta (for Mrs. Ferguson) said that in 1934, when Mrs. Ferguson's boy was ill and a specialist had diagnosed tuberculosis, Dr. Pim examined the boy and virtually contradicted the diagnosis.

Dr. Pim poured into Mrs. Ferguson's ears a great deal of domestic woe, and afterwards told her that his wife had suggested that she should marry him but that finance stood in the way.

Mr. Valetta added that Mrs. Ferguson possessed a certain amount of the world's goods, and it was suggested that she should provide for Mrs. Pim and make the divorce possible.

"This man, with high attainments in his own profession, behaved in a way which I will not try to describe," Mr. Valetta added. "Suffice it to say that he laid siege to this lady."

In 1935 Mrs. Ferguson went to Torquay with Dr. Pim at his earnest importunity. They stayed together as man and wife.

DIVORCE PETITION

"Imagine her surprise," continued Mr. Valetta, "when she was served with divorce papers citing her as intervener, Mrs. Pim as petitioner, and Dr. Pim as respondent."

The petition was withdrawn after a few days.

"This inquiry has been forced on this lady because of the most scandalous things circulated in Cheltenham and Ireland to the effect that Mrs. Ferguson had broken up the Pim menage," Mr. Valetta added.

Mrs. Ferguson denied in evidence that she and Dr. Pim knew each other when they were children, and denied that any misconduct took place in 1933.

Dr. Pim, giving evidence, said he was an Irishman, and knew Mrs. Ferguson as a child. When he met her on holiday at Greystones, Ireland, in 1933, she said "We played together as children."

Mr. Valetta: Is it your case that you were hunted by this woman from first to last, and that she insisted on foisting herself on you?—She foisted herself on me from June 1933 for a year.

Groupers' Aim

The Buchmanites or "Oxford Groupers" are adherents to a religious movement founded by Dr. Frank Buchman, an American evangelist.

The movement, which is undenominational, aims at spiritual rejuvenation. It began with conversations in Oxford colleges, was taken to South Africa by University men, and has since spread through the world.

FLIGHT PLANNED TO NEW GUINEA

San Diego, June 10.

The wilds of New Guinea, heretofore almost inaccessible to white men, may be conquered this year by a Navy-type flying boat which will drop food supplies, instead of bombs, and shoot with cameras instead of machine guns.

That was revealed here when Richard Archbold, research associate of the department of mammals, of the American Museum of Natural History, arrived to superintend construction of a plane, at the plant where the Navy's big craft are built.

The expedition into one of the few remaining unexplored spots on the world map will be led by Dr. Austin L. Rand, of the museum, Archbold said.

When the plane is completed, late this autumn, the expedition will get under way flying directly across the Pacific on the track of the Pan-American Airway clipper ships as far as Guam.

From Guam the flying explorers will take off directly for New Guinea.

It is the intention of the expedition to remain at least a year in the little known sections of New Guinea collecting mammals, birds, and plants and studying the habits of the natives, and the history of the flora and fauna of the region.

The plane, Archbold said, would be used in dropping, by means of parachutes, food supplies to be picked up later by ground parties, and in locating suitable routes, and locating camping sites for the explorers. Special cameras will be used to photograph spots which otherwise could not be reached.

On a previous trip to New Guinea, Archbold became convinced that only an airplane would solve the transportation problem satisfactorily for explorers in that area.—United Press.

U.S. WAR ON TAX EVADERS

Rich Men who "Know the Ropes"

TREASURY TO TAKE ACTION

Washington, May 28.

President Roosevelt declared war to-day on wealthy individuals who pay less income tax than the Government intended they should.

American income tax practice is for individuals and corporations to work out themselves how much they owe the Government, and send the money to the collector of taxes. If the Treasury experts disagree with the returns, they take legal steps to collect the extra amount.

Much tax legislation has been poorly and hastily drafted and wealthy individuals, able to hire expert lawyers, found it easy to reduce their yearly income tax. They took the line that, if they did not claim all exemptions possible, no one would claim them for them.

Even if the practices of a small group of individuals were legal, they were immoral, the President said to-day. He quoted the flagrant example of a man who owned a yacht, which cost £20,000 a year to run. He incorporated the yacht and turned over £600,000 of securities to the corporation.

He was thus able to deduct the salaries of the master and crew and depreciation of the yacht from the income which the securities provided. He rented the yacht from the corporation and enjoyed its use in the same way as if he continued to own it directly.

INVENTION OF LOOPHOLES

Such conduct amounted to the invention of loopholes, said the President. Taxes, which these individuals escaped, fell on the shoulders of the less wealthy.

The Treasury are continuing their inquiries, and, when finished, suggestions will be made for plugging up the loopholes by legislation.

The move of the President is politically shrewd, in view of the present efforts to balance the Budget. It will shift some of the blame of an unbalanced Budget on to rich tax evaders. It will also lead to the supposition that economy measures would not be necessary, if a just amount of taxation was paid by the wealthy.

The President did not say how much money the Treasury had lost, which he felt he would not disclose, but said that it amounted to many millions.

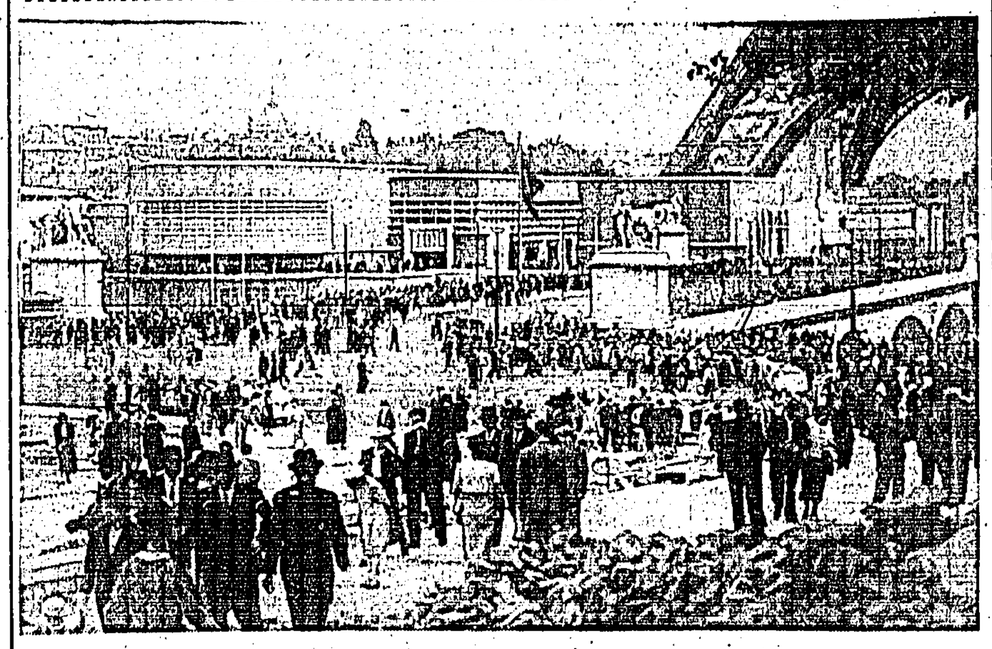
NEWS IN PHOTOGRAPHS



The stream of visitors at the International Exhibition in Paris is increasing daily but the visitors had to put up with walking among boards and other building materials when this picture was taken as the exhibition is still not quite finished.

AGED NUNS FLEE SPAIN—These aged Spanish nuns, at a time in life when they hoped for peace and quiet, are fleeing the war-torn country where they no longer can be of service. They are shown on board a British destroyer, about to be taken to Marseilles, France, with other refugees. Meanwhile war continued its devastating path through Spain, with Loyalists and Insurgents locked in a struggle for many of the ancient cities.

MYSTERY—Despite efforts of Army Air officials to keep photographers away from the new mystery stratosphere plane, this picture was taken through the fence at the airport at Burbank, Cal. The plane is designed for flight at more than 30,000 feet above the earth's surface. Details have been closely guarded, but it has a 55-foot wing-spread and is 38 feet long.

FORD COMPANY'S ENTERPRISE

£50,000 PREMISES IN ENGLAND

It has been arranged for Sir Malcolm Campbell to open the new Ford dealers' premises just completed on New Road, Dagenham, within sight of the Ford Works. Messrs. W. J. Reynolds (Motors), Ltd., are the dealers, the building having cost £50,000. The property is said to be the largest Ford dealership under one roof in England. The structure is 375 feet long and 310 feet deep. A large car park is reserved to one side and an additional four acres of ground have been purchased for future expansion.

Every known modern convenience and facility has been included in the building to handle great volumes of work with the utmost efficiency. Overhead travelling cranes have been installed to move car parts into the huge stock room where more than 14,000 storage bins have been arranged in systematic rows. Hydraulic dollies are at hand to move heavy parts.

From the large showroom customers may be taken to the used car department without going outdoors; to the administration offices on the first floor or to the stock rooms. In front of the used car department is an eight-pump petrol and oil service station with ample room for two lanes of cars. A comfortable customers' waiting room has been provided and nearby is the service department in which the most modern tools and equipment have been provided for every type of job that the workmen may be called upon to perform.

MAN-MADE WEATHER

The effects of blistering sun and drenching rains are duplicated by man-made weather produced in the laboratories of Ford Motor Co., Ltd., Dagenham, in testing paints used to finish cars. A weatherometer is the machine used in experiments to record the resistance to the elements possessed by paints and body finishes.

The machine can simulate blazing sunlight or heavy rainfall at will. It contains a lamp which produces ultra violet rays which have the same detrimental effect on paints and varnishes as has strong sunlight. It also contains a rain-making unit which drenches the painted surfaces within the Weatherometer just as they would be soaked if left outdoors.

Tests are continuous for periods of three weeks or more during which paint and various specimens are alternately subjected to intense "sunlight" or penetrating "rain." Such tests are equivalent in wearing effects to years of actual hard natural exposure. If the quality of the paint under examination is inferior, the test will cause the painted surface to lose its gloss or even crack and peel.

This is just another of the many tests to which parts and materials used in Ford cars are subjected to produce a perfected product and maintain the Ford high reputation.

BIG JAPANESE CRUISER

HERE AFTER ATTENDING CORONATION

The impressive outline of the Japanese cruiser Ashigara was seen in Lyeemun Pass shortly before 9 o'clock this morning and, exactly on the hour, the cruiser dropped anchor in harbour and fired the first round of a salute to the country.

Blackhead Fort replied to the salute and, as the echoes of the guns died away a motor boat took off from Queen's Pier conveying the Acting Consul General for Japan, Mr. H. Okamoto, to pay his respects to Rear Admiral Sonosuke Kobayashi in command of the cruiser, which has been to England in connection with the Coronation.

Official calls followed at which Naval and military detachments acted as Guards of Honour at Queen's Pier, Government House and at the Tamar.

At 9.20 a.m., Commodore Dickon boarded the Ashigara receiving a salute of 11 guns from the cruiser. Similar courtesy was accorded Brigadier Seth Smith when he paid his call at 9.40 a.m. The Admiral then called at the Tamar and Flagstaff House, the Tamar and Blackhead Fort saluting after which he paid his call on His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government, Mr. N. L. Smith, shortly before 11 a.m. His Excellency returned the call at 11.35 a.m.

The chief event in the visitors' programme to-day is the "At Home" at the Japanese Consul General's residence, No. 7a, Conduit Road, at 4 p.m. The men will be sightseeing under the guidance of the Japanese Residents' Association.

NEW HONGKONG ORDINANCES

DELAY IN PRINTING NOTIFIED

The Gazette contains the draft of an Ordinance to amend the Ordinances and Regulations of Hongkong (1937 edition) Ordinance, 1936.

Certain administrative changes and the removal of the Prisons printing staff from Victoria to Stanley have made it necessary to defer arrangements for printing the new edition of the Ordinances and Regulations to be prepared under the Ordinance and Regulations of Hongkong (1937 edition) Ordinance, 1936.

The object of this amending Bill is to include in the new edition legislation now in preparation or awaiting His Majesty's pleasure to be signified.

Clause 2 of this Bill enables legislation in force on January 1, 1938, to be included in the new edition by substituting that date for January 1, 1937, in sections 7 (1), 8, 11 (2), (a), 11 (2) (b) and 11 (2) (c) of the principal Ordinance, with consequential amendments in sections 10 (1) and 11 of that Ordinance.
